"OREGON CAPITAL FOR OREGON INDUSTRIES"

"Oregon capital for Oregon industries," that is the plea which the Oregon State Chamber of Commerce is broadcasting to the business men of the state.

Industrial development from within is seen by the state-wide organization as one of Oregon's great needs. To this end, service to local

The last piling for the north and south Coos bay jetties has been driven and only the rocking remains to be done to complete the estimated $3,310,000 job. The money appropriated, however, will more than finish the work, and the port of Coos bay is planning for an extension of the north jetty for 1000 feet and the south for a few hundred feet farther to sea. These extensions will be asked of congress at the next session.

Oregon farmers expect to plant about 6 per cent more wheat this fall than was planted a year ago, according to reports received from some hundreds of growers, says F. L. Kent, statistician, United States department of agriculture. It is estimated that 898,000 acres were seeded to winter wheat in Oregon last fall, hence an increase of 6 per cent would bring the prospective acreage to be planted this fall up to 950,000 acres.

industries is one of the initial steps every Oregon city is asked to consider in its industrial program.

There is no discounting the value of outside capital and industries in this encouragement of productive industries at home, but rather a recognition that no more forceful presentation can be made to new capital and new people to invest and locate in Oregon than a demonstration of our own faith by ourselves investing in what we have to offer.

The tendency of Oregon business men to prove their faith in the value of well-managed local industries, utilizing farm products, is becoming more evident in all parts of the state. Canneries, the linen mills, and other projects offer evidence of this widespread progress.

Impetus to the movement has recently been given by the action of the citizens of McMinnville and Yamhill county in their subscription of $7500 to retain and enlarge a plant for the canning of poultry meat. Later a $20,000 corporation will be formed, according to the present plan.

A complete and competent survey by Oregon cities and towns would, in the opinion of W. G. Ide, manager of the Oregon State Chamber, disclose many similar opportunities for the profitable employment of

BASKETBALL PAVILION TO BE FINEST IN WEST

University of Oregon, Eugene.—New student body basketball pavilion, the only one of its kind in the West, will be ready for occupancy November 1, it was announced today by Ted Larsen, chairman of the student building committee. With the frame practically complete, the structure, which will cost $169,000, is nearing completion.

Designed for only one sport, that of basketball, the building is 173 feet by 225 and approximately 70 feet high. It is being constructed of cement with a special roof made of iron and steel in the shape of a dome without the usual rafters and trusses. Spectators, therefore, will have a clear view of the floor and players will never lose sight of the ball while it is in play.

Although the building has an ultimate seating capacity of 12,000, only 9,000 can be accommodated this fall as some of the seats will not be put in until later. They are to be so arranged that few will have to sit behind the backboards. The floor will be of the spring type, containing three courts. Twelve exits will take care of the crowds.

The structure was financed by means of the $5 student building tax fund, but it is expected, since basketball has become such a popular sport, that gate receipts will soon pay for the construction cost.

INSPECTS POULTRY AND BERRIES IN OTHER SECTIONS

H. B. Howell, county agent, made good use of his vacation of two weeks and came home last night all enthused over the poultry and berry possibilities here after seeing what has been done in Washington. He went north via Walla Walla, Yakima and other eastern Washington points. He then went to Canada and visited northwestern Washington, where the poultry business was studied. He found the farmers in the berry, dairy and poultry sections exceptionally prosperous and believes that the same condition will result here when the lessons learned by the Washington farmers in co-operative effort have been learned here. Mrs. Howell accompanied her husband on the trip—Grants Pass Courier.

PRUNE CROP GETTING UNDER WAY

Prune harvest has started, and then it has not started—fully. The fruit is not ripening evenly this year. After the first drop of fruit had been taken care of some of the driers were forced to close down for several days to give the fruit time to ripen further. Then when it did ripen in some of the orchards the prunes would not drop readily, which was a bit freakish and retarded the drying still more. Now that a shower has visited the orchards the fruit is ripening more rapidly and falling better and prospects ahead are brighter.—Myrtle Creek Mail.

CRESCENT CITY HARBOR REPORT IS DELAYED

Crescent City, August 23.—Assurance that the report on the Crescent City Harbor project would be in the hands of the Rivers and Harbors committee at Washington, D. C., not later than October first of this year, was the word brought back from San Francisco, by the committee of Del Norte county men, who went to the city last week, to inquire into the reason for the delay of the report.

Reasons for the delay of the report so far, were the routine work in connection with it, and the fact that the U. S. Engineers at Washington, D. C., had been asking that additional information be included in the report from time to time, thus making it necessary for the district engineer's office, located at San Francisco, to go into additional details.
