her kitchen when she is working there. It would save the busy kitchen worker much sweltering if the electric fan were used in the kitchen. For kitchen comfort alone the electric fan justifies itself. Not only is the kitchen hotter, on account of the heat of the fire, but the steam of cooking foods adds its heat. Gases from the flame and cooking odors could be ventilated out of the kitchen by using the electric fan there. Thrifty women, who are so accustomed to pinching pennies, need to consider this health as well as economy stunt to save their vigor and their dispositions and their clean linen.

Had Small Start
Beginning in a very modest way some years ago when this method of transportation for hire was carried on by the "flivver" type of car, Mr. Lemen and several other individuals commenced operations between Portland and Salem. Finding that by working together equalizing the fares and running frequent schedules from the same depots in the two cities, rather than by their individual irregular and conflicting efforts, better served the public, increased their revenue and reduced their expenses, further efforts were put forth and connections made at Salem with the cars of another group of individuals operating similarly between Salem and Eugene. The result was mutually gratifying to the travelling public and the operators of the two groups formed the old Portland, Salem, Albany Stage Line. Another group of individuals operating similarly between Eugene and Roseburg then began to connect with the line, thru tickets were honored and baggage checked thru from Portland to Roseburg. Stimulated by the effects of co-operating the three line later incorporated as the Oregon Stages, Inc., with the terminals at Portland and Roseburg.

Many Benefits
The result of incorporation, centralized control and all its attendant benefits under the able management of Mr. Lemen and a staff of competent officials, can be seen and realized any day between Roseburg and Portland and the important cities intermediate thereto. Eight thru schedules are maintained daily between Portland and Roseburg; between Portland and Eugene more than double that number, and on the more congested Salem-Portland Division an hourly schedule each way or 32 schedules are maintained. This frequent regular service for the transportation of passengers, baggage, express and newspapers; well appointed depots with ticket agents in all the cities en route; courteous and dependable drivers and safe, comfortable and up to the minute equipment has had no little share in the prosperity and upbuilding of the cities, towns and communities along the route traversed by the Oregon Stages. In addition to this splendid local service the Oregon Stages, Inc., has been pioneer in and instrumental in effecting joint ticketing of passengers over some fifteen other stage lines embracing the territory between Vancouver, B. C. to all points in Oregon, the Redwood Highway section of California and Washington.

Merger to Benefit
That the merger of the Interurban Line under the management of the Oregon Stages, Inc., will be of benefit to the travelling public is undoubted. Local service in Southern Oregon will be improved and the reclining chair day and night coach service thru to Portland, connecting at Roseburg with Coos Bay points; Grants Pass with Redwood Highway points like Eureka and San Francisco and Medford, Crater Lake and Klamath Falls will in the opinion of Mr. Lemen give to the whole of this territory a stage service second to none in the country and a service from which the Southern end of the State in particular will benefit and to which they are rightly entitled.

THE KITCHEN COOL
The housewife who starts the electric fan going when she sits down in her living room, or uses it in her bedroom at night, forgets to start its cooling breezes in

ASHLAND HAS IT!

Some communities speak of climate, others of soil, still others of scenery, and so on. But each of these, Ashland can say "Ashland Has It!" Nature did indeed smile upon Ashland.

In addition to its natural resources, however, a community needs cooperative effort directed toward making the most of these resources. At Ashland—as in almost every other community—the program of the Chamber of Commerce is planned with this end in view.

Ashland needs the fullest cooperation of all in furthering these plans. In other words, our Chamber of Commerce needs your membership and active support. Has Ashland that? It's up to you to answer affirmatively!
