Indian Tepee to White House If Curtis Should Be Elected

By ALBERT T. REID

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Senator Charles Curtis, of Kansas, and leader of the United States Senate, is the first of the dark horse regulars to announce his candidacy for the Republican Presidential nomination in 1928.

In the Senator is combined the blood of old New England—the Hubbard and Curtis families of Massachusetts and New Hampshire; the early French settlers and traders—Convilles and Pappans, and an inheritance of Indian royalty—for Senator Curtis is one-eighth Indian—hereditary descendant of two well known Indian Chieftains.

He seems destined by birth for leadership. His great grandmother was princess of the Kaw tribe of Indians, a daughter of White Plume, their Chief. Her grandfather was Chief Pawhuskie of the Osage tribe, which are now perhaps the richest people per capita in the world.

The Senator's mother died when he was three years old, and he was taken back to the Kaw reservation by his grandmother, who directed, as far as possible, his early years and instilled in him an ambition for greater things than being races at the fairs and gatherings.

Spirited From Reservation
It was his grandmother who, when the government started the transfer of the Kaw Indians from Kansas to a reservation in the old Indian reservation, persuaded young Curtis of the wisdom of embracing the world of his white people, and after the exodus had begun, helped to spirit him out late at night.

He walked to Topeka—some fifty-five or seventy miles, and from that time his ambition, his study and his genius for hard work have carried him steadily on and to the place he now occupies as leader of the Senate of the United States—second only to the President in importance.

Young Curtis studied law awhile driving a hack in Topeka. He was admitted to the bar in 1895. After three years of practice he was made county attorney where he served two most successful terms. He then engaged in private practice. His clients came and so did money.

Then in 1892 "Charley" Curtis was nominated for Congress from the fourth district in Kansas.

Out to Ride to Win

Since that time he has spent fifteen years in the House of Representatives at Washington and almost twenty years in the Senate.

He has been a conspicuous figure in both branches and has had a hand in the shaping or passing of every important piece of our legislation in the past quarter of a century.

The Senator is not spectacular. One of the most able parliamentarians in the country, he has labored in a knowing and effective way to accomplish those things he has undertaken. He cares not for the pride of authorship. Results count with him.

That same dogged determination and perseverance made him the successful little jockey whose fame was known as far as civilization then extended in Kansas. They say he rode like "all hell had broke loose."

From an Indian tepee on the Western plains to the White House, in Washington is about the widest possible stretch in this country. He has already come to within a step of it.

In his acceptance of the proffer of the Kansas delegation he says he will not be a stalking horse for any other candidate.
