Family's Food Budget Reduced To $4.56 Weekly

An average family of five, including two adults and three children aged from 3 to 11, can live comfortably and safely on a food budget of approximately $4.56 a week, according to foods and nutrition specialists at Oregon State. They point out, however, that this can be accomplished only if the home maker spends her money wisely and plans her menus carefully. Specific directions as to just how to purchase and prepare food to come within such a budget are contained in a new bulletin issued by the home economics division of the Oregon State college extension service, entitled "Low Cost Menus for One Month with Recipes." It was prepared "as an aid to the thrift program of those Oregon homemakers who are maintaining for themselves and their families a desirable standard of living with little expenditure of money but with a very substantial investment of time, abilities, skills and interest."

Menus included in the new bulletin were planned to meet nutritional needs and to provide as much variety as practicable with the limited expenditure. While variety adds zest to appetite, it is pointed out that menus planned on a very low cost basis can cater only to healthy, normal appetites.

Evaporated whole milk and dried skim milk are inexpensive and easily handled and are valuable foods, the bulletin points out. It urges families following low cost menus to provide each child with a quart and each adult with a pint of whole milk each day. Eggs, at least three or four a week for each child under six years, are practically essential in supplying the necessary iron in the diet, and wherever possible each member of the family should have an egg a day, according to the bulletin. Butter, another diet essential, is used at least as a spread for bread once a day.

Cod liver oil is not included in the $4.56 budget, nor is bread. If there are infants from one month to two years they, at least, need cod liver oil, the bulletin says. It is assumed that flour will be provided through various relief agencies.

While first developed as an assistance to relief committees, the menus, recipes, market list and other suggestions in the new bulletin have been planned to guide the meal planning and food preparation of every family which independently is cutting food costs to a minimum.

Copies of the bulletin can be obtained free from county extension offices or from the college.

at auxiliary convention recently, and persuaded him to stop in Medford for the public gathering on his way south.
The meeting here Saturday evening is being sponsored by the Jackson County Medical society, assisted by the auxiliary to the society and the Jackson County Health association of which Miss Mildred Carlton is president.
Dr. Hager is a speaker of national repute and southern Oregon residents are considered fortunate in securing him for an address in this city.

Federal Land Bank Catching Up on Huge Loan Volume

The Federal Land bank of Spokane is getting "back to normal" after performing the almost superhuman task of catching up with the huge volume of loan applications which flooded the institution following the passing of the emergency farm loan act in the spring of last year. E. M. Ehrhardt, president, revealed today.
While the field appraisal staff of the bank has been caught up since about the first of the year, it is only now that all of the departments of the bank have reached a point where applications are being handled as rapidly as received.

"The volume of new applications is slowly getting back to normal which naturally would be expected in the light of the huge amount of loans made during the past year and the improved condition of agriculture in the Pacific northwest," Mr. Ehrhardt pointed out.
"In the 14 months since July 1, 1933, 6218 Land bank loans have been closed, aggregating $20,918,199 and 13,116 Land Bank Commissioner loans have been closed for a total of $25,398,595. In some cases farmers received both a loan from the Land bank and one from the Land Bank Commissioner, the latter being to refinance farmers' debts, accumulated during the depression, on a long term, practical basis."
