Dearest of all Mothers:
Of course you are waiting to hear how my laundry problem is working out. Well, my laundry had accumulated until it was rather large. While I was pleased with it all—everything was so fresh and white, all the flat pieces ironed—it would be a little expensive to send the Economy Wash every week. Especially now that Will has had another cut in his pay check. So I think I will pick a week when the weather is fairly decent and send a bundle to be Damp Washed. I am sure it is going to work out fine. Junior's and Bobby's blouses and Ruth Ann's little dresses came out just fine. I didn't send the very best of their clothes, but after seeing those I sent last week, I am sending them all this week.
Last Monday, formerly Blue Monday, I wrote several letters, went over our budget and caught up on some mending. Do come and see us soon as we are all anxious to see you.
Dearest Love,
NANCY.
P. S.—Will says, never again am I going to do my own washing; that I must always phone 146, the Medford Domestic Laundry, and have them call.
