Farm Planning Is Discussed in Circular

Information on planning the farm business, with lists of farm management bulletins and market reports, and a budget form are contained in a circular letter on the agricultural situation released by the Oregon State college extension service.

"The basis of a good farm plan is a carefully prepared budget of expected receipts and expenses. Farm records are very helpful in farm budget planning," says the circular.

In addition to the budget form, Oregon farmers may also obtain from the county agricultural agents, free of charge, a sample farm account book furnished by the agricultural adjustment administration.

Twenty-two bulletins are listed in the circular which contain information to aid farmers in planning the farm business. A complete catalogue and calendar of outlook, market, price and crop reports issued by the agricultural extension service is also given, and a list of circulars available by mail from various market news offices of the bureau of agricultural economics of the United States department of agriculture.

Outlook information may be used in planning the farm business to assist in estimating the probably income from various crop and livestock products and the probable expenses for farm operation, and family maintenance, says the circular.

PUBLIC OPINION AND THE BANKS

By F. N. SHEPHERD
Executive Manager
American Bankers Association

WHILE banking today appears in a wholly distorted light in the eyes of some, the more reasoning elements in our population undoubtedly have a less jaundiced view than would appear from certain irresponsible orators, often posing as spokesmen for that indefinite quantity called "the mass" of our people.

Anti-social acts on the part of some bankers formerly have been the subject of spectacular exposures, but I can say without reservation that they were in no way typical of the acts and attitudes of the vast majority of their fellow bankers. The public mind was shocked into the belief that these antypical instances were far more representative than they really were, and this belief has been encouraged by political and demagogic elements.

The Bankers Today
The bankers who are in charge of our banks today represent men who withstood the temptations and avoided the economic pitfalls of the great boom. If they had not they would not be there, or their banks would not have been able to survive the rack and ruin of the economic hurricane, by which even many banks and bankers, whose conduct was above reproach, have been destroyed. The other types of bankers, those that fell below the high standards of professional ethics and business prudence that characterized those that remain, have passed out of the picture. But they have left for those that remain a difficult heritage of suspicion and ill will.

How irrational this is, when we reflect that not more than three or four per cent of our entire population suffered personal loss because of what any banker did or neglected to do, whereas literally millions of bank depositors did not lose a single cent as a result of banking difficulties and really owe a vote of confidence and thanks to their own bankers who were true to the highest conceptions of their stewardship and brought their institutions and their customers safely through the greatest business disaster the world has ever seen. It has been a peculiar feature of the psychological distortion of the times that many who owe nothing but gratitude to their bankers joined in blaming the banker far out of proportion with any rational consideration of the facts.
