Portrait of An American
By RAYMOND PITCAIRN
National Chairman
Sentinels of the Republic

Who is the typical American? Just what is he like?

There seems to be doubt on these questions in the minds of many men in public office today. Much of our recent legislation suggests that they regard him as willing to swap his American birthright of independence and opportunity for the lifeless regimentation now imposed on certain populations abroad.

But there should be no such confusion. A portrait of the typical American was clearly drawn in the Bill of Rights of our Federal Constitution. Read it and you will see that he is a man who stands firmly for:

Freedom of religion, freedom of lawful speech, freedom of the press, freedom of peaceable assembly . . .

The right to be secure against unreasonable search and seizure, to be immune from governmental inquisition, to trial by jury in all civil as well as criminal cases . . .

The guarantee that he shall not be deprived of life, liberty or property without due process of law, and that he shall be protected in all these and other rights even against government itself.

In that insistence on definite rights and powers is reflected, I maintain, a true picture of the real American citizen—the man who works and earns and saves and on whose character and effort depends all the strength of our government. It has stood unchanged for almost a century and a half. It remains as accurate today as when first drafted.

When our politicians get that picture clearly in mind we shall see fewer efforts to inject into our government the ideas of a regimented Europe—whose tragic effects we read daily in dispatches from across the sea.

America, our lawmakers should remember, is still full of Americans—sons and daughters of the hardiest, most self-reliant breed of pioneers and liberty-lovers the world has ever seen. No one can take away their individual freedom—and make them like it. The Bill of Rights still remains our national portrait.

I am very forgetful aren't I? Last week I mentioned masks etc. but I forgot to mention Halloween crape paper and black and orange construction paper. I also have got some nice Christmas cards now—photographic views of Southern Oregon. Come in and see them. They would be nice for you and I to send to our Eastern friends. The school boy or girl that corrects all the mistakes in spelling, capitalization, and Grammar this week will get the tambourine in the window.
