Many Hear Head of State D. A. V.

One of the most largely attended meetings in months was held by the Disabled American Veterans of the World in Eagle hall on West Main street last night and marked enthusiasm was shown over the state convention to be held here June 11, 12, and 13.

The large attendance served as a mark of honor for E. G. Gavin, Oregon department commander, who addressed the meeting and received committee reports regarding convention plans which he is to submit to headquarters for distribution among chapters throughout the state. Harvey Cassman, chapter commander, presided.

The program which is in charge of the teachers will be at 8 o'clock instead of during the regular lecture hour.

Crowded Out Last Week

The following was handed in for last weeks paper but was crowded out so we will print it now for what it is worth:

Mrs. Buff Bohran Bantam and family of twelve babes moved into one of the display windows in the Jones Grocery where they will live until after Easter. One morning, Mr. Jones was discovered missing and was finally located in the backyard digging big, fat, juicy angle worms. He would drop one into the window and Mrs. Bantam would call her flock. One greedy chick would grab the worm and in spite of the combined efforts of the rest would gobble it down like a piece of spaghetti.

Mrs. Humphrey has a black bantam with a family of eight which she feels sur would make a better Easter window display—at least they wouldn't show the smudge. Mrs. Edward Farra was heard to remark that she had a brown bantam that would have liked an opportunity to show her brown babes to the world.
