IS NEW DEAL CHANGING? Those who follow politics have noticed a rather remarkable change in Mr. Roosevelt's more recent speeches and public announcements. It has been much less critical than in the past of the groups which oppose his Administration's aims and methods. On his swing around the country, most of his major and minor talks were commendatory and mid-1937 car which set a new all-time high for the company in point of sales and popularity. However, there were more genuine engineering changes and improvements in the Nash for the '38 than in any other car on the market.

As a consequence, to use the words of Paul Mallon, there is a strong feeling that "all this maneuvering of the past few weeks is a clever and effective screen for a rather complete unannounced reformation of the New Deal from within." Mr. Mallon classifies a "good friend of the White House" as authority has the statement that the President has definitely renounced the plan of heavy government spending for job-creating and business and farm relief. He says that the balance of the year will be spent in spending money to reduce the deficit and the budget balance, and that the Supreme Court reorganization measure will be halted.
