

Sprague Winds Up Whirlwind Campaign

Portland, May 11—Coming down the home stretch apparently well out in the lead, Charles A. Sprague will spend the last week of the primary campaign in Portland, having already covered a large part of the outlying state.

During his stay here Sprague will deliver two radio addresses. The first will be over KOIN at 9 p. m. Friday, May 13, and the second will be over KGW at 9:45 Wednesday, May 18. The Salem editor has a splendid radio voice and he gets over a real message to those interested in a revitalized republican party ready to meet problems of the day in an understanding and business-like manner.

Sprague has completed a swing over the state, during which he met thousands of voters and left with them an impression that presages his success at the polls Friday of next week.

While the Sprague campaign did not start until after the last date for filing, it has been an intensive one and reports arriving at the office of Robert Boyd, state manager, indicate it is a winning one. In a remarkably short space of time the Salem editor has become known over a great state in a manner that means votes. This has come about without flare of drums, for the Sprague campaign has been one to draw support of thinking persons who want energy coupled with a dignity in keeping with the office being sought.

1-MINUTE SAFETY TALKS

By Don Herold

We'll drive moderately,
and if we have
an accident,
it will be a nicer one

How to Have More Trivial Accidents

If we are going to have automobile accidents, let's have little ones. It is not such a serious matter when we dent a fender. What we don't want to dent is a skull.

How shall we select for ourselves the smaller or more insignificant or skin-deep grade "C" accidents? I have a book in my lap, compiled by The Travelers Insurance Company on last year's smashes and crashes. It tells us which kind of accidents are the deadliest. Let's get a line on 'em and avoid THAT kind.

About the surest way to cinch your death in an automobile accident is to mix in a little alcohol. With an intoxicated driver (you or somebody else) at the wheel, your chance of death is greater than with a sober man at the wheel. I mean if you take 1,000 drunk accidents and 1,000 sober accidents there'll be more deaths in the drunk accidents.

Even an intoxicated pedestrian has a better chance of being killed than a sober pedestrian—per accident.

There has been a lot of loose talk about the safety of driving fast. A lot of people think that it is all right to drive fast if they drive "careful". But the figures show that the rate of death per accident which involves exceeding the speed limit is much worse than the average death rate for all accidents due to improper driving practices.

Places, too, have a lot to do with the violence of your accident. The rate of death per accident on highways and at rural intersections is more than 200 per cent greater than on city streets.

Time plays a part, also. The death rate per accident after dark is about 60 per cent worse than during daylight. May all your accidents be little ones, and they're more apt to be little if you know about and avoid these deadlier spots and practices.
