STICK

Some people go through life imagining that if they could get somewhere else, the conditions would be much more ideal.

The Devil is a classic example. According to tradition, he was once general manager of Heaven. He made one move too many and landed where he is.—Bruce Barton.

Keep Trying

By Lyman A. Fritz
Of all the people who lack success (I have met them by the score) Very few of them are failures, They tried! They could do no more.

If a man gives the best that is in him, Puts up a whole-souled fight, Why should the world condemn him? That certainly is not right.

The only failures that I know Are people who do not try; The meek and weak, with yellow streak, Who sit around and cry.
