Have you looked at that fine steelhead fly rod and the steelhead reel at Ross & Ross. You better come in and look at them and then go down to the river and try to get a big steelhead and enter in the steelhead derby. Bob Burns now heads the list with a 6 pounder. He is the only man on the derby at present. But I expect that it won't be long before there are other entries in the contest to make it a worthwhile contest.

It is pretty hard to tell right now if there are many steelhead in the river. There have been reports of catches being made but I don't believe they did, because they would have entered the fish in the contest here. I have had bad luck this year for I have hooked five steelhead and lost everyone of them.

About a month ago I was up on Evans Creek, fishing for trout. I met two Californians who excitedly shows me their catch, stating that it was the best catch they had ever made. Got me excited for I thought they meant big trout. Imagine my chagrin when I looked into the basket—not one fish was over 5 inches and some of them look ridiculously small to me. I was dumb-founded and speechless till the next day.

Then to find that Vintie Beall has met that same kind of thing. July 4th he was out on old Diamond Lake-Union Creek road where so many little creeks flows into Rogue River. He met several parties who showed them fish that were not over 5 inches, some of them as small as 4 inches.

Vintie says that it is his firm belief that Minnehaha, Hurry On and Foster creeks should be closed to public fishing. He states that he, in many years of fishing, has never caught a good sized trout there and it is his belief that all those creeks are stock streams and therefore should be closed to public fishing. That's right and why not? I have known of some streams in this state being closed as stock creeks.

WRESTLING NEWS

Jim London, international heavy-weight champion, made his first Medford appearance a winning one last Monday night at the fairgrounds park by taking two straight falls from Pete Belcastro, both with body presses, after the Weed Italian had been given one of the neatest wrestling lessons yet seen here. Approximately 1,000 fans saw the first local program in two months.

London, strong as a bull, man-handled Pete in a manner to bring cheers from the large audience. He grabbed the first fall in 13 minutes and came right back nine minutes later to pin the Italian with the same sort of a hold. The champ set up his first body press with a short spin, and finished off Belcastro when the latter missed a dropkick and laid himself wide open.

In the middle event Cowboy Dude Chick defeated George Wagner with an airplane spin in the third round, after Wagner had won a fall in the second heat with sonnenbergs and a body press. In the next round Chick picked up his opponent, spun him a dozen or more times, and whammed him to the mat. Wagner made a valiant effort to answer the fourth-round bell, but he couldn't make it. Walter (Sneeze) Achleu grabbed the opening event from Ernie Piluso with two out of three falls.

Geo. Hunt Buys Tomlin Residence

The purchase by Mr. Hunt, Medford theatre owner, of the Tomlin country residence on the Old Stage road six miles from Medford was announced by the new owner, who said that he and Mrs. Hunt planned to move into their new home about August 1. In the meantime, the spacious Hunt residence on Wellington Heights will be placed on the market, Mr. Hunt said.

Located on the 19-acre Tomlin estate is a two-story, 11-room white frame house of early American architecture, considered one of the most beautiful dwellings in southern Oregon. It was constructed about 25 years ago by Walter Bowne, now of San Francisco, and has been occupied by Mr. Tomlin since 1928.
