Local Boy Tells Of Eastern Trip

A letter was received by Mr. and Mrs. Phil Thurston of Old Military Road from their son Jim Thurston who left Medford a week ago to enter the United States Naval School of Music in Washington, D. C.

August 9, 1941
Dear Folks:
I am writing this letter from Sid's apartment. He has gone to work so I decided to give a blow by blow description of my trip as taken from my notes.
As follows:
Saturday morning I woke up in Spokane after having had a good night's sleep. We made a 40 minute stop at Spokane in which time I had a good breakfast but not much time to look the town over. Leaving this town we saw many beautiful lakes and streams lining the mountainous route. The sky is cloudy making traveling more pleasant. We are still in mountainous country and have just passed into northern Idaho. 11:30 A.M. I have been riding in the observation car this morning. The mountains are pretty well forested but so far I have seen no trees over a foot thick. We followed the Priest River all morning and have just crossed into Troy, Montana. It seems that every time I get my eyes focused on something interesting we go thro another tunnel.

5:05 P.M. We are now in Glacier National Park. The mountains are much more rugged and tower above on every side.

Interval: The train just passed through its first snow shed—something new for me.

Montana from what I have seen must be all mountains. I would advise giving it back to the Indians. Passing over the Continental Divide I saw a little monument that to me looked like a miniature of Washington's.

Going out of the park we stopped at the little town of Glacier. This stop was of special interest to me because of the displayed Indian wigwams over the surrounding grounds and on the station platform there were a half dozen old chiefs in all their tribal trappings. You could never see anything more realistic. Snow fences line the tracks to keep snow from drifting over and blocking the tracks.

Looking back I see the Rocky Mountains in all their splendor. The sunset silhouetting the rock crags makes it easily seen why they were so named. Also I can't say that I would envy the pioneers their first look at the Rockies as an obstacle. I wouldn't have been over yet if I had started when they did.

Interval: At the summit we dropped the extra engine and are now going pretty fast. By the way, it is rather hard writing while the train jolts you from one side to the other. We are now out of forest and mountains and all that can be seen in all directions are low rolling hills. It looks as if we might have a storm sometime tonight.

Interval: A little while ago we passed a large oil field. The first I had ever seen. The porter is making up the berths now so I will stop for this evening.

Sunday morning, August 10—This morning we are in North Dakota. Seen from my window are low rolling hills patched with wheat fields and small herds of cattle grazing. Every once in a while we pass a small town about the size of Jacksonville. Snow fences still line the tracks but no trees can be seen.

Interval: At Minot where we are now stopped it is raining so I am not getting off. I think we have passed the geographical center of the United States as I saw a monument which corresponds to our present map location.

Interval: I met a girl on the train who lives and works in Washington, D. C.'s public library. She had broken her back in a car wreck and was still in a plaster cast. I am going to see her after I've been in Washington a while.

(To Be Continued)
Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Powell, accompanied by Nancy Kay Murphy, left last Friday morning for Glen Ellen, California. They returned home Sunday evening. Nancy Kay staid with her mother. She had remained here for a visit with her grandparents and other relatives when her mother returned to Glen Ellen the last of July.
