Sane Driving On

Labor Day Urged

By Earl Snell

Calling for a "rededication of Labor Day to the spirit of American workmen," Earl Snell, secretary of state, today urged Oregon citizens to accept personal responsibility for the prevention of traffic accidents during the coming Labor Day week-end.

"Now, more than ever," Snell declared, "the nation needs the full mobilization of its human resources to assure maximum achievement in our supreme effort for national defense. The nation can ill-afford tragic loss of manpower, caused by traffic death, for truly, the death or injury of a workman in a traffic accident is as significant a loss to the nation as the death or injury of a member of our armed forces."

Increased traffic, caused by holiday driving, increases the accident hazards on the highway unless drivers exercise additional care and avoid dangerous driving practices, he said. The secretary of State urged each individual driver to accept as his responsibility the burden of preventing traffic accidents.

Inasmuch as 75 percent of the accidents in the state occur on highways in the rural areas, most of them resulting from speed too great for conditions, drivers were asked to observe these simple precautions:

- 1: Reduce speed before entering curves.
- 2: Reduce speed at night.
- 3: When caught in long lines of cars, be patient, don't take dangerous risks attempting to pass the cars in front.
- 4: Never attempt to pass another car on a curve, while approaching the bow of a hill or when vision is obstructed for some other reason.
- 5: Don't drive when sleepy or fatigued.
- 6: Avoid driving after over indulgence in food or drink.
