Early Marketing of Meat Animals Urged

While current meat shortages reported from some parts of the country have not occurred to any important extent in Oregon, the present situation holds an element of warning to livestock producers, points out R. G. Johnson, head of the department of animal husbandry at Oregon State college.

In Oregon, as well as elsewhere in the country, farmers are raising the largest number of meat animals on record, with marketings normally scheduled to reach an all-time high late this fall and in early winter. Current shortages in some parts of the country are caused by an unusually large export and domestic demand for meat supplies plus some local dislocations caused by price control.

Because of the current demand and favorable prices Oregon cattlemen could well afford to move some stock such as fat cows to market in greater volume than usual this summer and early fall so as to avoid a possible congestion in slaughtering and shipping facilities later on, says Johnson.

The same holds true for hog raisers who may have hogs on hand now that could be hurried along to good size and finish by heavy feeding. Present price rations are such that heavy feeding of a well balanced ration is justified and will return good profits, Johnson believes.

Thus, rapid forcing of Oregon meat animals to good size and finish will help consumers and producers alike by relieving shortages and avoiding later congestion.

Mr. Len Taylor wrenched his back a couple of weeks ago and is just recovered enough to be able to be around without crutches.

I-H CLUB AGENT RESIGNS

L. E. (Bing) Francis, for the past three and one half years Jackson County 4-H Club agent, has tendered his resignation to the Oregon State college extension service to accept the position of superintendent of production at Wing's Cloverhill Registered Guernsey Farm.

CANNED SALMON FROZED

The government froze all canned salmon of the 1942 pack early this spring. It is thought that if enough fish is canned that some of the extra fancy brands may be released. The high cost of tuna is caused by the lack of being able to ship it to America. There is just as much tuna as ever.

ARRIVES TODAY

Mack Barbour of Klamath Falls will arrive in Medford this morning to receive entries for the rodeo phase of the Jackson County Sheriff's Posse's big rodeo and horse show, to be staged at the fairgrounds park at 8:30 next Saturday night. All cowboys desiring to enter the various events are asked to contact Barbour at the Hotel Allen.

Union Official Buys Purkeypille Home

Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Rupp have many house guests from California. Mrs. Rupp's mother Mrs. Fred Scott from Pismo Beach and Mrs. Wade Halysam are spending two weeks at the Rupp home, also Mr. and Mrs. Bill Walsh and son Billy, Mrs. J. Walsh and sisters Mrs. Horn and Mrs. Ruth Bolsic all from Los Angeles. Mrs. Horn may locate here, that is her purpose here, to look for property. Mr. and Mrs. Rupp bought the Purkeypille property and have been living here for the past month. They have three children, Virginia Lee, Scotty and Harriett.

Mr. Rupp is the business representative for the plaster, cement and brick masons union. He is chairman of the committee that furnished all the playground equipment for the laborers trailer camps, also serving on a committee with Mr. Mayfield and Mr. Carpenter trying to do something never accomplished before, in amusement and comforts for the laborers' wives and families. Mr. Rupp has been all the way up the coast from San Diego to Camp White and was so well pleased with our country here and the little town of Central Point that he bought the Purkeypille property. His labor office has been moved from the Liberty building in Medford to his home. They meet every two weeks. Recently friends gathered at the Rupp home to celebrate Mrs. Rupp's birthday. Sixty guests, bringing refreshments and many lovely gifts, appeared at the home. The boys in the union presented her with a washing machine. Mrs. Prentice, with members of her accordion band, played during the evening. Mrs. Rupp has been in the office with her husband during the summer.
