OLD SETTLER NEWS:

Mr. Mayfield told us the other day that the first saddle he bought was a Lakeview saddle and was the first saddle that Will Freeman ever sold. This happened in the early 1890's when new saddles were the pride of every young buck in the county. Mr. Mayfield headed east of the mountains to break broncs. Those particular broncs are still unbroken.

SPECIAL HEALTH INSURANCE FOR POULTRY

Crown Controller Pellets

A great many poultry growers have profited very materially in recent years through the use of Crown Controller Pellets in keeping all kinds of worms under control and increasing the thriftiness of their birds. Crown Controller Pellets are regular Grower Pellets with the addition of a very efficient worm controller for both round and tapeworms. This is not designed as a radical, harsh treatment for heavily infested birds. The medicated pellets contain relatively small amounts of five active worm expelling agents that will keep the growing birds relatively free of round, pin and tapeworms and with keen appetites and thriftiness if used as directed. Growing birds will not thrive if allowed to become worm infested. Under such conditions the use of a harsh worm expeller will usually cause a further set-back. Crown Controller Pellets cost but slightly more than the regular Grower, and we strongly recommend an exclusive five day feeding of them when the birds are EIGHT, TWELVE and SIXTEEN weeks of age. Simply substitute the medicated pellets according to the directions found in each sack. The birds continue to eat as usual and receive the worm expelling ingredients along with the regular feed. Crown Controller Pellets are used with equal assurance and satisfaction with any age birds and may be used prior to eight weeks if necessary. Don't overlook them in your feeding schedule this season.

We unloaded a car of Crown Feed last week so all of our feed stock is fresh. They included a ton of Rabbit Pellets so we can furnish this feed until our next car arrives.

650 BANDAGES MADE—

The Red Cross bandage class is rejoicing over 650 bandages they made last Tuesday. This will help a lot although it is only a drop in the bucket and the good work should not stop for a minute. There were nineteen present. In spite of the hot weather, the women are realizing the great need for these dressings.

New California Law Aids Rationing Plan

Recent action of the California state legislature making it a felony or misdemeanor to counterfeit ration currency or to deal in it in any way is going to put more teeth in the OPA enforcement program by enlisting tangible support of local law enforcement officials. John A. Bruning, of the regional OPA enforcement staff, declared today during a routine visit with local officials.

Why Cook at Home These Hot Days!

"We hope other West Coast states will enact similar legislation", Bruning emphasized. He said that California was the first state in the country to take such action.

On July first a new ration currency protection branch, a sort of an "FBI within the OPA", was set up in Washington, with district units, to help local OPA boards establish techniques for safeguarding ration currency. Bruning announced. John Foster, San Francisco, will head this activity for the region assisted by Capt. John F. Foster, retired from the Secret Service, as consultant. Jack L. Davis will act as special agent attached to the Portland office.
