Dairy Sire Sale To East Reveals Oregon Standing

The recent sale at auction of a mature Jersey sire, developed and proven in Oregon, for $5200 to a Tennessee breeder illustrates both the high standing of Oregon-bred dairy cattle and the possibility of continuing to improve this quality by keeping enough such proved sires in the state, commens P. M. Brandt, head of the animal industries division at Oregon State college.

The sire which brought such a good price at the annual Washington Jersey sale at Eumclaw was Brampton Basil Stan, consigned by Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Sherman, who operate the Sherman Stock farm at Scappoose. The sire was purchased by Roy McDonald, a breeder at Chattanooga, Tennessee.

"It is noteworthy that this animal, that already has 12 daughters that have averaged more than 11,000 lbs. of milk and more than 600 pounds of fat annually, was developed here in Oregon. He is six years of age and leaves 32 daughters in the Sherman herd."

"Because of the large number of dairy cattle on official test in Oregon at the present, it is believed that this may be the beginning of another era of unusual activity in the movement of good dairy cattle to other states," Brandt continued. "While breeding operations have continued during the war, there has been a noticeable slackening of the movement of purebred livestock from the far west to the east as compared to prewar times."

Professor Brandt added that it is to be regretted that the blood of this high-grade proven sire cannot be used to a wider extent in the herds of this state, but the owners cannot be blamed for making a profitable sale and one which will undoubtedly enhance the prestige of Oregon stock in another part of the country. The proven ability of this sire to transmit high production to his daughters is the reason why the new owner paid $5200 for him. Brandt pointed out and emphasizes anew the advantage of keeping records on such well-bred animals.
