EDITORIALS

Two young men called at the house the other day. Walked right in with a glad hand shake and announced that they were entered in some kind of a contest in which they needed our co-operation to win. They were sure nice appearing and almost won the heart of all of us.

It seemed as though they needed a certain number of points to win this contest and as we would surely want to help them, all that was required of us was to pick out a few of the numbers on the list and sign on the dotted line. Of course we would have to dig up a few dollars to pay for the subscriptions.

It was sure hard to tell them no. In fact we nearly signed and paid before we thought of our own people here in town.

All at once it dawned on us that we could get the same magazines either from Jim Ross or Stone's. And if something happened that we didn't get our magazine, we would know where to go to find out why. Maybe we would have a hard time locating these young men in case we didn't get the first issue.

But it was sure hard to say no.
