THE TEEN-AGE PROBLEM

Man calls sin a chance.
God calls sin a choice.
There has been so much comment on the Teen-Age club, the Teen-Age new club building and the real vital Teen-Age problem that we believe a good old fashioned discussion of the matter might do some good.

We hear remarks on all sides such as "The Teen-Age club is a wonderful thing," "What good is a Teen-Age club going to do, kids have too many things to do now days anyway," "I wouldn't let my kids go out with that bunch of roughnecks," "If the parents would come out and take an interest in them it would be different."

Nearly everyone has some opinion to express on the subject. This is a vital subject. The Teen-Age group will have a part in all our lives in just a few more years. They will take their places in our business, in our industry and our schools and government.

Last week some of our boys of this age group were in some trouble. They didn't have to get in this trouble. They chose it. Why did they choose the trouble? Can they be helped to choose a better way? Can this kind of trouble be put down without putting down the boys? What is the best way to help these boys and all boys to make the better choice?

These are all Teen-Age problems. They are your problems and my problems. They are the problems of our churches, of our lodges, of our clubs and of every organization that has a worthwhile motive.

We would like to hear from our readers on this vital subject. We have three teen-age children of our own. We are personally interested. We have our opinions and we would like to hear yours. The columns of this paper are open and we will publish your letter with or without your name. Only be sure and sign your letter.

ABOUT WORLD NEWS

Secretary of the Treasury says the "break" in prices since February 5 may reasonably be interpreted as a sign of healthy adjustment. That apparently the commodity market was just over priced and began to right itself.

We notice that the distillers have been given the go ahead signal. Perhaps with the drop in grain prices there is no more world shortage and there will be plenty of grain. Perhaps? ? ?

Mr. Krugg, the headman of the Interior Department tells us that the oil shortage is here to stay. "America's demand for oil finally has outdistanced the supply," he says. "It means that America's oil life line runs right now to the middle of the explosive situation in Palestine."

Now this will have direct effect on every one in this section of the country. Looks like we will have to keep our eyes on the shale deposits that we have around close to home and see if we can't get some oil out of them.

Venezuela has lately become the world's largest exporter of oil. The country is a regular lake of oil, at least underneath. They also produce more oil than any other country except the United States. It's a good thing they are not located close to the Russian Bear.

Another thing about that country. (Venezuela) Everyone over eighteen gets a vote, regardless of race, sex or literacy.

Mr. Truman, in his second report on aid to Greece and Turkey announces that he will ask for more money to help the Greek armies fight the guerrillas. What's the answer to this is too much for us, but it looks like war from our little corner. Whenever congress has to dig up money to help some one fight. It must be war.
