

Locals

Virgil Cardwell and wife and Mr. and Mrs. Vince Clafin spent part of the holiday at Crescent City. They came home on account of the rain Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Tharp have moved into their new house in the western part of the city. The house is not quite completed but the family were too glad to have a home of their own to let a few inconveniences stand in the way.

Mrs. Oscar Minnick received a letter from Mrs. Lucy Bither, who formerly lived on the corner of Fourth and Oak streets in this city. Mrs. Bither is now living with her youngest son and family at Newburg. She asked to be remembered to all her old friends in Central Point and wished she could see them all again.

Mr. and Mrs. Myrtle Eakins of Maywood, Calif., are visiting the Harrisons of Gibbon Acres.

VOLUNTEERS AND DRAFTERS

Under the new draft law the Army is likely to call 200,000 to 225,000 men into the Service within the next twelve months.

There seems to be no definite estimates as to the number of volunteer enlistments—every volunteer reduces the number of draftees. However, Army Chiefs of Staff believe that most of 200,000 new men in the Service will be volunteers.

Mr. and Mrs. Roger Yost and sons Donnie and Craig, spent the holiday with their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Yost, Sr., and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Jones.

Not Too Late to Seed Alfalfa Here

There's still a chance to plant a forage crop that will salvage something from an otherwise peculiar growing season.

Alfalfa—preferably Grimm alfalfa, will fill the breach in many areas of western Oregon, believes E. R. Jackman, O.S.C. extension crops specialist. Time or planting alfalfa is fast running out, however, he adds.

Jackman recommends that alfalfa, seeded alone, ordinarily be planted in western Oregon not later than June but with extra moisture this year a little later may still do. Recommended rate of seeding is 12 pounds per acre on a firm seedbed. Inoculation is also suggested.

In recent years, the acreage of alfalfa in western Oregon has been going down—almost to the vanishing point in some counties. A principal reason for the decline in alfalfa acreage is the fact that as old stands have been played under, the land has been replaced with other crops. Current high prices have made farmers reluctant to lose a year's use of their land during the time it takes to get alfalfa established, Jackman explains. Although little value is received from alfalfa during its first year, Jackman points out that in following years, it will produce fully twice as much in pounds of digestible feed as any other crop. On non-irrigated land it approaches what is expected from irrigated ladino clover. Jackman describes alfalfa as being the "queen of the forage family." It has everything that means "oomph" in a feed—high protein, vitamins, minerals—and possibly some food values not yet discovered.
