DO WE WANT IT?

They would have us believe that this CVA proposal is for the good of the people, these Washington, D.C. diplomats who sit behind their desks and decide what the people of the Northwest need. The richest region of the country needs government control in order to build up the vast resources that it produces, they try to cram down our throats.

For one hundred years the old Oregon country has built itself, has fought for admission to the union and has sub-divided itself into the wealthy states of Washington, Oregon, Idaho and Montana. It has received little help from anyone and has built its own government and improved its own resources. Now, when our forefathers have built an empire, the bureaucrats of the political world want to get their fingers into our pot. They want to tell us how to irrigate our land and how to build our dams and what to do with our Indian lands and a million and one other things that are stated in this CVA proposal under the caption "For the good of the people."

But, before they do these things, they will take the river away from us and raise it for atomic energy and national defense. These things come first, the bill infers, and the people are the last on their list.

Since when has it been for the good of the people for three men to have final discretion in matters concerning a region of 255,000 square miles? Since when has a president of the United States had the power to appoint three men to run an administration that is supervised solely by the president? Three men, who need neither intellect nor information, but just to be a friend of the chief executive of the nation.

The Tennessee Valley Authority is constantly thrown in our faces as a good example of government control, but is it a good example? Are the little people of Tennessee happy? Are the farmers happy and the small businessmen? We do not know. We only hear one side of the story, the only side that has a voice to speak with, that of the little boys who work for Uncle Harry. In the words of Tom Humphrey, editorial executive of the Portland Journal who really looked into this thing, "You simply don't oppose TVA any more. Not in Tennessee valley. Not if you want to stay in business and in one piece."

Is that the way we want it in the Pacific Northwest?

POINTS WEST

By Vivian McMurtrey

BROWNSVILLE, ORE: Levi-clad City Chief of Police Bob Calhoun says he just can't figure out this mess with the Multnomah County Sheriff's office in Portland.

It's like this: Mike (Lard) Elliott, Multnomah County Sheriff, is the law for one third of the state's citizens. What happens in Portland affects all of Oregon. Therefore there will be active up and down-state participation and opinion to be reckoned with in the current "Recall the Sheriff" movement in Portland.

SALEM, ORE: The doors were wide open at the State Penitentiary last Friday evening at 7 p.m. Drove in past the front guardhouse—no one there. Went up the avenue of trees past watering lawns where trustees were wandering about tending to their hoses, and then up and in the main building. No guards; nobody to talk to at all. As the prisoners weren't able to give any permission for visitors to go about, I had to leave, wondering—no not wondering—knowing how jailbreaks are made.

PORTLAND, ORE: Ripley should have heard this one, stranger than man bites dog: It is man searches for lost bloodhound.

The man is Oregon politician Sig Unander and the dog is his new saddy-eyed pooch Vladamar, who strayed into the blackberry vines near his house. Unander had to track him down and bring him home.

SWEET HOME, ORE: Prez of the Chamber of Commerce Dr. J. J. McCarthy is cutting the ribbons at the formal opening of Sweet Home's newest and modern department store.

Note: Could the fact the C. of C. president officiates be because the town's mayor also owns a store?

NEWPORT, ORE: The "Grub," which according to Webster's Dictionary, means "to dig in or under the ground," is the name of a brand new steel cabin cruiser which has been causing such a splash here. It is berthed at the C.M.C. docks here and belongs to Oswegan Skipper Larry Hofer.

OREGON-AT-LARGE: Few knew that writer George Moorad, who died in a Royal Dutch airlines plane crash in Bombay July 12, was the only child of Captain Elizabeth Moorad of the Portland Police Department. Her son represented her life's work and ambition. Mrs. Moorad is in charge of the Women's Protective Division in the Portland Police Department, and an ardent and militant W.C.T.U. worker.
