Worthy of Print

Washington, D.C., November, 1952—High among the nostalgic tributes to the press that were brought forth during the recent National Newspaper Week, is, we believe, the verse of John Lair, the bard of Renfro Valley, Kentucky. While it was heard over the air, we believe this Renfro Valley ballad should be presented in a less perishable manner. And, with the permission of Mr. Lair, we give you herewith the opening verses of "The Hometown Paper." We do not know what paper the poet had in mind, or even whether it still exists. Thus, while it was not (necessarily) written of this newspaper... well, if you think the shoe fits, we'll try to wear it!

"We never realize how much the hometown paper means. Till we have wandered far away from the old familiar scenes, And then it's just as welcome as a letter from a friend. We read it through from front to back, from beginning to the end. And when we see the names in print of folks we used to know. A flood of tender memories will set our hearts aglow."

"We remember how that paper was a standby in our home, And how we'd scramble for it just as soon as it would come. Sis looked for all the personals; Dad read the livestock news; Granddad liked editorials—if they sided with HIS views! But Mother never seemed to have a part that she preferred. She just set down, when she had 'time, and read it every word."

Speaking impersonally, for ALL "hometown papers," we believed that no matter what advances are made in type-setting and printing equipment and in the gathering and transmission of news, the "hometown" editor's attitude toward his job and his responsibility to his community will never change. He'll keep on striving to make his paper important enough in your life so you'll "read it, every word." Look for more of "The Hometown Paper" next week.

Tryouts are being held for the Christmas operetta to be presented in December by the students of the 4th, 5th and 6th grades under the direction of Miss Oldham. Practice will begin shortly for the "King's Christmas Carol."
