Donald Harris and family of Medford were also guests of the Albert Hackerts over the holidays. Mrs. Harris is the Hackert's daughters.

Henry Newcomb, Vancouver, B. C., is visiting Mr. and Mrs. Quintin Jordan. He arrived here with them the end of the week after the Jordans, with their sons, David and Harold, had visited at Vancouver and Westminster, B. C., for the holidays. Newcomb is a cousin of Mrs. Jordans and he plans to be here a month or longer.

Peter Matheny is a medical patient at Community hospital this week.

Joy Ann Guidry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Francis Guidry, is a medical patient at Sacred Heart hospital this week.

Medford's first traffic fatality in 1955 on the first day of the New Year was the death of James Kenneth Jones, 59, of Jacksonville. He was struck by a car while using a crosswalk at the intersection of Main and Front streets. He died in a Medford hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilber Arnold, Medford, were New Year's day visitors at the home of Mrs. Ida Wright.

Some newly arranged displays at the Jacksonville museum include photographs of Joseph Lane, territorial sheriff; and William Green TVault, first territorial postmaster. In the courtroom on the second floor, one showcase is devoted to a display of old dishware and antique glass which includes several pieces recently added to the museum objects. Another recent gift to the museum is a heavy silver communion service which was the first used at the Jacksonville Presbyterian church after it was dedicated December 4, 1881. Also on display is a tea service, a part of the Native Daughters collection.
