There's one thing that Dennis Keasbey can't make good, and that is a lead pencil.

Mark Twain says there is no fun in England. Surely not; Oshkosh is the place for fun.

A good fly point-on-the-end of your nose. A chromo for the first ten correct solutions.

Truth may be stranger than fiction, but fiction is the most interesting. People never do like strangers.

No Indian was ever known to play on a brass horn. Hence, Pope's allusion to his "untutored mind."

The man who habitually and regularly left the door wide open all winter, is just learning to shut it tight every time.

"Stick to it!" as the sage shouted when the shoemaker sat down upon it. And he did so. And so did they both of them.

"What," savagely demands the New York Sun, "does Mr. Hayes want the army for?" We suppose he wants it for example.

Let us look up and take courage. There is no centennial and no international exposition this year. We have yet something to be thankful for.

Either the supply of corpses is running short or Ohio medical students have all graduated. They don't come together so frequently as they used.

"All that a man wants," said the tramp, "is a chance. Build low roots and put out the moon and I'll never beg for another morsel of food as long as I live."

The President's backbone is held responsible for all this excitement, but his Y-tones are on his feet, all the same. (Only they're not; they are on the army bill.)

"I am going to Colorado for my health," said young Keating to old Hobbsell the other day. "Ah!" replied the old man, "and when did you leave your health there?"

The unceasing and Herculean labors of the red ribbon clubs are reaping their harvest everywhere. Even money isn't as tight as it was, and shows a steady inclination to reform.

The Sultan has ordered that any Turk attacking the Austrian troops shall suffer death. There is a sure way than that to kill, if the Sultan will only try it. Make him work, make him work. It will kill him in a minute.

What this country needs is a general law providing for compulsory vacation. Business men, preachers, editors, should be compelled to rest all summer, and Congress—well, Congress ought to have a biennial vacation for two years.

"When I was a boy," said a prosy, long-winded orator to his friend, "I used to talk in my sleep." "And now," said his friend, "you sleep in your talk." But somehow, that didn't seem to be just exactly the point the orator was going to make.

A subscriber wants to know if we think it is wrong to drink cider. Well, yes, in these hard times, when beer is so much cheaper, we should think it was, very wrong. However, if you know where you can steal the cider, we suppose it will be all right.

"Byron, my son," said a literary father to his athletic son, "Byron, never played base-ball." "No," said the boy, pulling on his orange-colored shirt, "and George Washington never wrote poetry." Here the morning hour expired and the bill went over.

It is understood that the grasshopper and Jack Frost have effected a compromise this year, whereby the grasshopper is bound to leave enough of the crops standing for the frost to get one good, square, premature bite at. As for the farmer his share wasn't taken into consideration at all. He must look out for that himself.

It doesn't do any good to veto a butcher's bill. Bloggby tried it and the butchers, in defiance of all law and constitutional precedent, absolutely refused to vote any more supplies until the bill passed. Bloggby says the country is on the verge of a new revolution, and in fact the new revolution has come, for he now walks clear around the block to "Ovid that butcher's shop."

There is no authentic photograph of Medicine on file that we know of, but it is generally understood that the expression of her countenance was that of a man who had just gone into the cupboard in the dark, groped along the shelf for the old fat bottle with the broken cork, colored the wrong one and swallowed about three chances of rheumatism liniment before he found it out.

Sedalia, Missouri, is delighted over a male colt with five legs. This thing has got to stop right here. A five-legged male when he grows up will be worse than an eight-barreled revolver; a sort of a Gatling gun among mules. Just think of the havoc that may be wrought by a male who has four legs to enable alone, and an untrammelled leg to circulate around and attend strictly to business on both sides of the road? Let the colt be shot while it is yet possible to get near enough to it to shoot it in safety.

The whistles blew for noon and the little bay mule that worked in the feed trough, "Whence so much mirthfulness!" asked the pale gray mule who pulled in the wheel team. "I," replied the little bay mule, "am the fellow Robert Burns was thinking about when he wrote, 'A chiel's amang ye takin' oats.'" "Good enough," said the tall brindie male that worked on the rear swing, "but that's just where you're fooled; it's corn." And so it was. The respondent soon took in as many ears of corn as he could swallow at once, at grumbled at the rest of them for eating of asses.

The neighbor's cat had clawed the baby, and the man was going out to the woodpile with his axe over his shoulder and his gun under his arm. "Caron me back to the house," said the cat, who appeared to be chalk full of emotion, "that ought not to count, it was only a scratch." The man took his gun and looked thoughtful. "True," he said, "and this is only a scratch." And he laid the feline on the ground and held it down with his foot, and swinging the axe above his head, brought it down with dreadful force. There was a moment of dreadful silence, and then, while the cat from the high seat on her neighbor's shed, sang, "Oh, wally, wally, wally, the man scratched around up the back," and his three toes, and carried them in to his wife, and asked her if she supposed the doctor could see them on when he came.

The Cattle Disease.
The British Orders in Council which went into effect March 3 have put a stop to the export of live cattle from America to England. The United States with her more than 40,000,000 head of cattle can spare from her ample resources as many as 1,000,000 head for export. The business had fairly lost all to attain these proportions at an early day. It has now been checked by the obstructions thrown in the way of our exporters by the British Government. This action on the part of England seems peculiarly ungrateful, considering that the contagious pleuro-pneumonia in the United States, which is the cause of it, was imported into this country from England, in the systems of cattle raised off upon our dairymen by unscrupulous English exporters. However, there is no help for it now. The damage is done and the business has been checked. There appears to be no way to restore the business except by the repeal of the British orders, and there is no way to do that except to abolish the cattle plague from American soil.

That the cattle plague exists in our territory to-day is in part the fault of our own citizens. It is well known that the contagious pleuro-pneumonia has prevailed on Long Island since 1843, and in New Jersey since 1850. This covers a period of thirty-six years. It has been well known that individual farmers were losing from $1,000 to $10,000 worth of stock from its ravages. The attention of the agricultural public has been repeatedly called to the subject through the columns of the Weekly Tribune. Professor Law, an authority on this subject, has warned farmers and agricultural societies, by voice and pen, for years, that a malady was prevalent in this country, which was not called in the United States several years ago, and which might easily be introduced into the United States from the West. In Massachusetts and Connecticut the warning has been heeded, and those States have stamped out the contagion several times from their borders; but the great State of New York and her sisters to the west have allowed the plague to flourish absolutely unchecked until the present year. An admirable law was enacted at Albany, in 1878, in consequence of the exhortations of Professor Law, which was a step in the right direction, but the law was not called into operation until the publication of the British Orders in Council last February. The fact that the contagion prevails to-day for 350 miles along the Atlantic coast, and in places as much as 300 miles inland, is due as much to the apathy of our own people as to any other cause.

Considering that much fine stock has been sent in different years from New York and New Jersey to the dairy States of the West, it is a marvel that there has yet been no outbreak of this disease in that region. The West has escaped so far, and is to be congratulated thereupon. But how long will it enjoy this immunity? A single train of freight cars infected by the transportation of a few sick cows somewhere in the East would be sufficient to carry the contagion throughout the West. The disease is spread by causes so simple as that. Should it once reach the great herds we might never be rid of it.

The time appears to have come when there should cease to be any trifling with this plague. The safety of the West and the restoration of entire freedom to the export trade in live cattle demand that the contagion be confined to the six or seven counties in which it now exists, and that it there be stamped out speedily. In New York and New Jersey everything is being done that can be desired. But what are Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland and Virginia doing, and what is Congress doing to aid the power of the commonwealth to wage adequate war on this pest?—N. Y. Tribune.

Good Manners.
One of the minor vices of American society is exaggeration. The following words of Ralph Waldo Emerson show that the vice is as hostile to good manners as it is to sound morality:

"A rule of manners to avoid exaggeration. A lady loses as soon as she smiles too easily and too much. In man or woman, the face and the person lose power when they are on the strain to express admiration.

A man makes his inferiors his superiors by heat. Why need you, who are not a gossip, talk as a gossip, and tell eagerly what your neighbors or the journals say? State your opinion without apology.

The attitude is the main point. Assume your companion that, come good news or come bad, you remain in good heart and good mind, which is the best of all. Self-control is the rule. You have in you there a noisy, sensual, unbecoming, which you are to keep down, and turn all his strength to beauty.

For example: what a senseless and defective is laughter! It seems to require several generations of education to train a speaking or a shouting habit out of man.

Sometimes, when in almost all expressions the Chocoma and the slave have been worked out of him, a coarse nature still betrays itself in his conversation. The great aim is to shine, not to conquer your companion. Learn nothing but conceit—but to find a companion who knows what you do not; to tilt with him and be overthrown, horse and foot, with utter destruction of all your logic and learning.

There is a late invention of A. McLean, 833 Sacramento St., S. F., and is spoken of by eminent physicians and by patients who used through it. It is a most useful and comfortable to wear, is cheap and durable. The afflicted would say, try it in preference to any that we have yet seen.
