

THE COAST MAIL.
OFFICIAL ORGAN OF COOS CO.
SATURDAY, - - Aug. 16, 1879.

The Ohio Campaign.

Ohio is almost surely lost to the Democracy. Their candidate for Governor, Gen. Ewing, has attacked resumption and the general management of the national finances, with which the people are generally well pleased and satisfied. He is a "greenbacker," and his financial views have in every instance when they have been submitted to the people, been discarded. A very large proportion of the Democracy are rankly opposed to his financial theory, and it has no attraction for voters of the opposite party. The "New York World" and other Democratic organs denounce his doctrines, and if they attain any considerable degree of strength in the Democratic party at large, it will lead to a serious disagreement in the national convention of next year, and will lessen the chances of a Democratic victory in the presidential contest, as it does now, in the Ohio campaign.

Butler Again in the Field.

Gen. B. F. Butler is again formally before the people of Massachusetts as a candidate for Governor. Whether there will be the same combination by the other parties against him, which existed last year, remains to be seen. It is claimed by Butler and his friends that there were reforms brought about in the State administration through his efforts last year, and it is supposed that his strength before the people is now greater than then. The convention for making nominations by the party takes place on the 18th of September.

To put Silver into Circulation.

A late Washington dispatch says: A very decided effort is making by the treasury department to force the standard silver dollar into circulation. The demand for it has grown since Sherman issued the order to disburse officers to pay it out, and the next day the treasury proposes to pay in silver ten per cent. of the wages due the department clerks here. Giffilan thinks if he could pay out ten per cent. of all the governments expenses he would very soon get into circulation the mass of silver in the treasury that has been growing larger and larger with each month's coinage, and which now amounts to over $30,000,000.

A Gigantic Marine Railway.

Capt. Eads, the man who projected the improvement of the mouth of the Mississippi by jetties, now proposes to construct a marine railway across the Isthmus of Darien, instead of the canal which Lesseps advocates. His plan is to construct an immense railway by means of which a heavily loaded vessel may be taken into a "cradle" bodily, and moved from one ocean to the other; the time of transit for the largest class vessels be estimated at from 12 to 24 hours. The cost of the structure he fixes at $45,000,000 and he thinks it can be completed within four years.

ROBERT APPLE, an old Comstock mining superintendent, who died recently in Europe, has left $10,000 for the erection of a drinking fountain in San Francisco in the vicinity of the Oakland ferry landing. By the terms of Mr. Apple's will the foundation of the fountain is to consist of twenty tons of quartz from the Comstock mines—a portion from each mine. The fountain proper to be about twenty feet high, and made of iron in imitation of bronze, and inscribed "Robert Apple, M. E., one of the first settlers of the Comstock in 1850. So is built the whole city of San Francisco."

TEHARE LAKE, California, is still said to be receding. Should it continue to fall as rapidly as it has during the last two years, it will be but a few years till the bottom of the large lake is dry land. Crops are being raised this year on land over which a steamer sailed three years ago.

A LONDON dispatch of the 7th says: Financial writers say that the withdrawal of gold from England yesterday for the United States is probably a precursor of larger shipments in payment for American produce arriving here and in France.

The steamer Brother Johnathan wrecked off Point St. George fourteen years ago, is supposed to have been found in twenty-two fathoms of water. There is to be an effort made by San Francisco parties to raise the treasure which she carried down.

JEFF DAVIS intends to hold on to the property bequeathed to him by the late Sarah A. Dorey, to the exclusion of her brother, who will contest the will.

The frigate Wyoming with the American minister to Turkey on board, will cruise in the Black Sea. This is the first time an American man-of-war has entered the black sea.

The Skagit gold mines in Washington Territory, which created some excitement a few months since, are reported "no good."

Gov. THAVEN, has just re-commissioned Mark V. Brown, Esq. of Albany, Brigadier General of the second brigade, Oregon State Militia.

COAL sells for one dollar and one dollar and a half, in Carbonate, Pennsylvania.

By order of the postmaster general the free delivery service will be established at Portland, Oregon, on Oct. 1st.

The yellow fever in Memphis still increases.

CONSUMPTION IN COOS CO.
Causes and Remedies.

BY CHAS. W. TOWER, M. D.

Any person who will take the trouble to ascertain, will be surprised to learn how many persons have died during last year, and are dying now, of consumption, in Coos county. I have it from authority—a physician upon the Coquille—that the Coquille can no longer be called a healthy locality, and consumption seems to be every where up and down the river; maladies also exist which lead finally to this, most fatal of all diseases, and what holds good on the Coquille, is just as applicable here. We have seen as strong and healthy a man as we had among us, gradually yield to this fearfully fatal disease. Others who are to-day just as strong, will follow. I say we can avoid this result, and have ample proof for those who wish it. It is the duty of a conscientious physician, not only to endeavor to cure disease, but also to prevent it. To tell the people of this county the danger they are in, becomes so imperative a duty that I cannot shrink it. I know my ideas will not be received in the spirit intended, and I expect that wrong motives will be imputed to me. I make the broad assertion that there has not a person died of consumption in Coos county, that need to have had it at all. To prove this, it becomes necessary to inquire into the exciting causes of all these deaths.

Consumption, is either hereditary or acquired. It is hereditary when it can be traced through a generation in the same family, but the causes which developed it in the first place may be present in the second and third generation as in the first, and children who are said to have inherited the consumptive taint, may, by change of locality or method of life, be exempt. To illustrate my meaning, I will cite an instance: Dr. H. I. Bowditch, a world renowned physician, seeking for the cause of the death by consumption of a certain New England family, generation after generation of whom had died in the same manner, found the old farm house in which they had all lived, in a damp locality, and by his advice the family moved to an adjoining knoll of land, and consumption disappeared. So consumption can be proved to be hereditary if we make it so, and the idea that a person must die of consumption because their parents or grand parents have died of the disease, although a popular, is an exploded idea. Ample evidences can be produced to prove the fact to the most sceptical.

A person acquires consumption by living in a damp locality, by breathing bad air, by improper diet, in fact, in any way that tends to lower the general condition of their health. The great cause of consumption in this county, comes from living in damp localities, breathing air contaminated by foul gases arising from open drains and cess-pools, drinking water containing decaying vegetable matter. Last summer, from this latter cause, diarrhoea and dysentery were epidemic on the Coquille; this year at Newport and Eastport. We sometimes forget that there is a cause for every effect. I have satisfied myself of the cause of this trouble at the coal banks. You will find the families that were afflicted with this disease accustomed to drink water brought to their dwellings in wooden gutters, the bottom of which contains dead leaves and other decaying vegetable matter. They are not troubled with these diseases in winter, because the rains and abundant flow of water through the gutters dilute the poison so much that the danger is very much lessened. In the summer, the water is less in quantity, and of course, the effect of poison greater. I have no doubt a similar cause existed on the Coquille river, but please remember, you can inhale this air from poisoned atmosphere, and receive the same effect as if you drank it. Where several cases of any disease occur in a certain locality, and in different families, you can be sure the same cause is at work. There have been children in the town of Marshfield afflicted with obstinate diseases, apparently different in nature. These families lived over mud-flats, where the air was more or less contaminated. Medicines were taken with limited good results. The parents of the children spoken of, being persons who would listen to arguments, who believed every effect had a cause, followed the advice of their physician, moved their families from pleasant homes on the mud-flats, to less pleasant ones on the hill, and the result has been, they don't pay any more doctor bills, and their children are healthy. If any are sceptical about this, the proof is ready for them at any time.

Where there is one person who properly attends to the surroundings of his home, there are nine that never think of it. Show me a family in this county whose home is situated on elevated land; with a chance for plenty of air to circulate under the house; the house not surrounded with shrubbery; pure water in abundance; where drains exist to carry off the filth that will naturally collect about any house; where there is no standing water near, and I will show you a family blessed with health.

And even if their father or mother or grand parents died of consumption, you will not find any of it in that family. On the other hand, point out to me a house situated on low land, with no drainage, the house close to the ground, or even show me a house situated on the side of a hill, close to the ground, with the accumulation of filth for years about the dwelling, and I assure you some of the inmates of such dwellings, are as doomed to consumption or other pernicious disease as can be. I challenge anyone to name a person who has died of this disease in this county, the cause of which cannot be traced to their surroundings.

I will make another assertion, which can be proved, and that is, that any person whose age is 25 years or upward, upon whose system consumption has commenced its work, need not die of this disease, and that, by proper attention to all the little details of diet, pure air and the thousand and one things which aid (medicine left out) to build up the system, need not succumb to this disease if he lives in Coos county. "There is iron in our water and there is healing in our pines." We are blessed with the finest climate in the world, and if we continue to abuse our free gifts, disease will stalk among us, and either we or those we love better than ourselves will fall victims.

I have raised my voice in warning at the existing facts. A few will listen and take heed. Others will go on in the same old way. Let this be as it may, I have gained the sole object I had in view, which is simply a conscientious discharge of the duty I owe to the community in which I live. To make sure that some persons may not judge that I am wrong in my ideas, and think they have known of localities where the influences that cause this disease were absent, and still, persons became victims to it, I am obliged to be a little personal. Those of you who are acquainted with the writer of this article, know, or should, that he came to this county with this disease well developed in his system. He bids fair to-day to live as long as any of you, and has brought about this result, not by the miraculous and mysterious use of medicine, but by following just the advice he has given. Now, listen, that you may not judge your locality a healthy one, while I give the history of the cause, in his in all cases. His home was situated upon the highest knoll of land within five miles. Notwithstanding this, his mother and sister died of this disease; two brothers contracted the same, but attention to the things I urge have thus far exempted them from the result attending the first two. No shrubbery was about the house, and care was taken in regard to outhouses, etc., but still the cause remained. There was a living spring in the cellar of that old homestead. Many a time have I traveled around that cellar in a wash-tub, when the water, flowing from that spring, gave me opportunity. There was the CAUSE of all the disease that followed. If anyone had told us a cause why disease existed about our home in those days—before so much attention had been given to the cause, —we would have laughed at the idea, —just as many will be inclined to do now. But we don't laugh over the graves back in New England; and the time may come when the most sceptical among you, may have personal cause to remember my words of warning. This bit of personal history I hope will be excused. I have added it only from a sense of necessity.

Strange Suicide.

A strange case of suicide is reported from Chicago. Two sisters, Elizabeth and Ann Trowbridge, aged 40 and 43 years respectively, decided to commit suicide, and discussed the best mode of accomplishing the desired object. They at length fixed upon hanging, as having less terror than any other process, and made preparations for the work. They bought two ropes of suitable length, drove hooks in the ceilings each side of the parlor doors, dressed themselves in white, and having sent a sister who lived with them, upstairs, they stepped on to chairs and were soon beautiful corpses swinging in the parlor doorway. These ladies were well bred, were well educated and in comfortable circumstances; and the only cause which can be assigned for the strange conduct, is the loss of property by their father, which had reduced the circumstances of the family from comparative affluence to a competence of a few thousand dollars.

Fatal Shooting at Port Blakely W. T.

About 9 o'clock on the evening of the 5th, Geo. C. Hewitt, engineer of the tug boat Blakely, met Alex Smith, clerk in the Bainbridge hotel in Port Blakely, on the wharf. A feud had existed between them for some time, and some hot words were passed, when Smith remarked "I've got to blow your brains out and might as well do it now as any time" suiting his action to his words, he made a motion to draw his pistol when Hewitt drew his pistol and shot him through the neck killing him instantly. Hewitt gave himself up to the authorities. Deceased was from California some four years ago, and Hewitt is from New York.

Various Tragedies.

VIRGINIA, Aug. 4.—John and Morris Lancaster, brothers, had a shooting affray at Mason valley last evening. John was shot four times and killed. Morris was shot in the eye and escaped.

FORT FAIRFIELD, Me., Aug. 8.—J. Bolter, who grossly assaulted a child eleven years of age, was pursued by the people and shot.

GONNALLS, Tex., Aug. 5.—Dr. P. C. Winn, of this county, left Luling in a buggy, somewhat intoxicated, intending to return to Gonalls. His dead body was found next day three miles south of Lookhart.

SEDALE, Mo., Aug. 3.—Train No. 4, on the Missouri Pacific, carrying special car with Assistant Postmaster General Tyner and others, was fired on this evening two miles west of Dresden. The shot went through both windows of the car, narrowly missing both engineer and fireman. Robbery is supposed to be the motive. No clue.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 5.—This morning a party of five young men about town, while engaged in a game of poker, got into a dispute which terminated the game—a quarrel ensued between two of the players Emanuel Rose and William Rogers, brothers-in-law. The party returned to their homes and the quarrel between the men named continued until they drew their knives. Emanuel Rose stabbed Rogers in the chest, killing him in a few minutes. Rogers' death was instantaneous. The murderer attempted to escape, but is in custody.

STOCKTON, Aug. 8.—John Campbell a young farmer, twenty-two years of age, living near Atlanta, nine miles from this city, killed his brother-in-law to-night, named Bremer, shooting him off his horse while passing the house. Bremer who is a worthless cuss, abused his sister—Campbell's wife—and made things very disagreeable for Campbell and wife. Campbell came to town to give himself up for some reason started home again. Deputy Sheriff Atwood and Constable Brown overtook him and lodged him in jail. Campbell is very quiet about the affair and will not commit himself.
