TOWN AND COUNTY NEWS.

RELIGIOUS SUBSCRIPTIONS.—Reliable information from Gardner says there are twelve families there who are homeless and absolutely destitute. They are being made as comfortable as possible by the neighbors, but the community is small, and something should be done in other localities for their relief. A subscription has been drawn up and put in circulation here to enable those who feel disposed to contribute to the relief of these unfortunate people. Coos Bay should not fail to send forward something in such an emergency. The amount contributed will be placed in trust-worthy hands, and will be used where the greatest necessity exists.

RESIGNED.—Mr. Crosby, who has been for many years past keeper of the Arago lighthouse, has resigned that situation, and we are informed that the assistant keeper of the Blanco light will be promoted to be his successor. Mr. Crosby has been in the lighthouse service almost continuously since its establishment on the Oregon coast. He was once keeper of the lighthouse at Umpqua, and his son, who has been his assistant at Cape Arago, was born at the former place. He says the compensation has been reduced to so low a figure that he cannot afford to remain.

SCHOOL FUND.—The Board of School Land Commissioners at Salem have made an apportionment of the accrued interest on the irrevocable school fund among the several counties. The amount coming to Coos is $1404.48; to Curry, $489.04. This is at the rate of 77 cents to each child reported and the same will be apportioned to the school districts in September. The amount that will fall to this district is $154.00.

POST OFFICE APPOINTMENT.—The dispatches announce that Mrs. E. Schetter, wife of F. Schetter, has received the appointment of postmistress at Empire City. This is probably the most important office in Oregon that a lady has been appointed to fill, but as Mrs. Schetter is fully capable of discharging its duties, there is no good reason why she should not have the appointment.

HENLOCK TIMBER.—We are informed by Mr. Connor, of the new barrel factory at Empire, that he is prepared to use a great deal of henlock timber for staves. Henlock is quite plentiful in some localities on the Bay, but it has not heretofore been used for any purpose. It is heavier and stronger than spruce, and free from tendency to cause goods kept in it to taste of the timber.

ANOTHER ERROR.—Siglin says: "The proceeds of our tide and swamp lands, which might have been available were all squandered by the legislature of '72, on some project east of the mountains."

It is not true that one dollar of the proceeds of the swamp or tide land was expended by the Legislature of '72 on any project east of the mountains. But of course Mr. Siglin does not intend to misstate the facts.

RESIGNED.—Henry Rhodes, Marshal, has tendered his resignation of that office to the Board of Trustees. No action has yet been taken in the matter of selecting his successor. The cause of Mr. Rhodes' resignation is the fact that the fees of the office do not amount to wages, and he finds it necessary to look for a better paying business.

ROAD WORK.—Supervisor Ralston is connecting the road to Empire with Cedar street of this town by building a bridge across the marsh that has heretofore interrupted travel on that street. When this connection is made and a little more work done on the north side of town, a buggy can be driven from Empire to Newport, through this place.

TO BE REPAIRED.—W. B. Kroger, who came up on the Telfair last week, is employed in raising and repairing the life saving station at the cape. A raft of lumber required for the work was towed from this place last Sunday and was taken over the bar by the tug Escort.

Myrtle Pointers.

Weather warm; thermometer ranging from eighty to ninety-five.

The farmers have commenced harvesting the early grain.

Vegetables are coming into market plentifully and of all varieties.

Hon. B. Hermann, of Roseburg, made our little town a short visit this week.

Dr. C. B. Golden put in an appearance at this place last week.

The firm of B. Hermann shipped out of the river about ten tons of wool by the last trip of the schooner to San Francisco.

Mr. Dixon's school closed last Friday. He is a competent teacher.

The loggers of this part of the country are kept employed putting in logs, as lumber is now in better demand, since Mr. Bunch's new mill has been put up at Coquille City; and a better quality of lumber cannot be had elsewhere than on the Coquille river.

LOCAL BRIEVITIES.

The Jennie Stella arrived yesterday. The Arcata arrived Thursday afternoon.

W. H. JACKSON has returned from his California trip.

CAPT. W. H. DUNHAM, of the Myrtle, have moved to this place.

Crows down the Coast are reported in excellent condition.

MR. SNYDER, of Coquille City, is taking pictures at Ellensburg.

J. W. HAMILTON has opened a law office in the court house in Roseburg.

THOS. P. SHERIDAN, Esq., of Roseburg, has been spending some days on the Bay.

J. M. ADAMS, who once worked in this place, was lately married in Mitchell, Dakota; that's all.

MR. KROGHOLM, of Gardiner, a heavy loser by the late fire, has been in town during the week.

G. A. BRODIE, Esq., an attorney of Roseburg, has become one of the editors of the Star.

MR. COX returned from his tour on the Coquille, Wednesday. He visited the Sixes mining region, during his absence.

R. D. HUME arrived by the Arcata, Thursday, bringing three fine horses for breeding, to be taken to Rogue river.

E. O'CONNELL and Dr. Smith are catching a great many trout near the head of Coos river.

The Arcata takes a cargo of coal from the Southport mine the present trip; whether she is to run there in future is not stated.

A LIVELY fire was visible in the woods back of Lobree's mill, during the early part of the week—a foretaste of what may be looked for a month or two later.

The number of houses burned at the Gardiner fire was twenty-six, but we understand that the residence of Mrs. Breen was saved.

WE are informed that old Mr. Pitt, formerly of this county, but for several years past of Gardiner, lost everything he had there by the late fire.

A LOBBIE is preparing to build a sidewalk from his residence to connect with the walks of Front and Pine streets; a long needed improvement.

SIGLIN still harps on taking a 600 foot stick out of a 400 foot log, supposing, no doubt, that it can be made to help elect a Democratic President.

MRS. S. LAPP who lives on Isthmus slough destroyed a large wild cat, one day this week with a shot gun. That is a good example for farmers' wives.

THOS. R. SHERIDAN, County Clerk of Douglas county, accompanied by his wife and child, arrived at Newport last Saturday, coming by way of Gardiner.

It is stated that Mr. Hume has decided to build a steamer at Ellensburg, and that the work of getting out the necessary timber has already commenced.

It is not true that Chas. F. Wheeler died at Coquille City on the 26th or at any other time or place—he still lives, and is as well as when he was taken from here.

WE understand that Mr. Kroneholm is negotiating for the Central hotel property in this place, with a view to establishing himself permanently in business here.

MARSHAL RHODES, and ex-officio fire warden, has been on a tour of inspection of stovepipes this week; he found some cases where proper care had not been taken to avoid danger from fire.

C. L. MOSHER, formerly of the Western Star, of Roseburg, has gone to San Francisco to engage in journalism in some capacity there. Mr. Mosher has ability to succeed, and he has our best wishes for a successful future.

E. A. ANDERSON had the misfortune to lose a good work horse last Sunday. The animal was kicked by another horse and his leg broken so badly that it became necessary to kill him.

F. M. BRIDGES desires through the columns of the Mail to express his thanks to his many friends for their kindness and assistance during the illness of his family preceding his late bereavement.

JAMES OLIVER of Coos River has made a practice for years past of raising a small quantity of tobacco for his own use, and some to spare to his neighbors. It grows well and of is a good quality. The question is, why cannot the crop be made a source of revenue in this country?

THE great Hancock meetings at Myrtle Point and other points on the Coquille this week that were heretofore to be addressed by J. M. Siglin, S. H. Hazard and T. G. Owen, and probably "other speakers," were attended by T. G. Owen, Esq., candidate for Elector, of course; none of the other gentlemen. That is the taper of the "Hancock boom" in Coos.

THE Herald says: Very small quantities of meat are now shipped to Coos as compared with last year's, owing to the high price of it. It is said that the Knickerbocker Ice Company alleges that refrigerators have been taken out of the ocean steamers in order to gain space for the thousands of emigrants swarming hither.

Destructive Fire at Gardiner.—Greater part of the Village Consumed.

Last Monday, about 3 o'clock p. m., a spark from Hinsdale's mill, at Gardiner, was carried by the strong wind then blowing upon one of the houses in the village, and in a few minutes the building was in flames, in spite of all efforts made to extinguish the fire. From this commencement the fire spread with great rapidity, in many instances giving no time for the removal of furniture or other property from the houses, and raged till nearly the whole town was consumed.

Hinsdale's mill and buildings near it were spared, and are about all that is left of the once thrifty village. Simpson's mill was consumed, but the store was saved. Mr. Kroneholm, who owned a hotel that fell within the range of the devouring element, went up stairs and threw out of the window a quantity of bedding and clothing, but before they could be removed were set on fire and burned. He had just laid in a stock of provisions and other articles of considerable value, none of which were saved. Eph Burdard, who had a store, was absent at the time, and little if any of his stock was saved. Several fine residences, among which may be mentioned that of Capt. Leeds and Mrs. Breen, were consumed.

There was no insurance on any of the property burned; a few policies had been taken out last year, but all had expired without renewal. There are families that are left without shelter or provisions or means with which to purchase either, and must, for the present at least, become objects of charity.

Marble Improvements.—Another Survey at the Coquille Recommended.

Late Washington dispatches give a synopsis of the recommendations made by Col. Gillespie and adopted by the Government for improvements in Oregon and Washington territory. Each of the several points for which appropriations have been made, is the subject of special recommendation. As to the Yaquina improvement, he says that none of the examinations heretofore made can be used to-day in preparing the plans required in attaining the object of the appropriation, and he therefore recommends a re-survey and that work be delayed till charts and plans are perfected.

For the mouth of the Coquille river he recommends that before the appropriation be applied for commencing the training walls, under Col. Wilson's plan, a detailed survey be made of the outer bar, the river entrance and river basin, and that the operations of the winds and tides be observed. Training walls may be the proper way of improving, but he would prefer that a survey be made first, especially of the river bottom near the outlet.

Nothing is said about Port Orford breakwater, and the whole matter as to that work now seems to rest with the Secretary of War, subject to future action by Congress.

The County Exhibit.

The last issue of the News contains the following item: We publish the County exhibit this week; but our readers should know that it does not contain the warrants issued at the July term of the County Court which will amount to a number of thousand dollars, and are properly chargeable to the fiscal year ending July 1st as they are debts contracted in that year. So the exhibit shows the financial condition of the county to be much better than it really is. Instead of a decrease of $2000 county indebtedness during the last year as the Mail states, there is an actual increase.

Just why there should be this studied effort on the part of that paper to make things appear worse than they are, we cannot understand. The exhibit as published in either paper does "contain the warrants issued at the July term" 1880. There is no foundation for the statement that there is an increase instead of a decrease of the county indebtedness, unless it is implied that the County Clerk has made a false statement of outstanding orders as well as of receipts and expenditures. The exhibit, which we do not doubt is correct, shows $2,270 more on hand July 1st 1880 than July 1st 1879; it shows the orders redeemed between July 1, 1879 and July 1, 1880 to be $13,748, against $11,463.03 issued in the same time. This amount includes the issue of July 1879 and excludes that of July 1880, and covers the entire fiscal year. We are pleased to find the showing so favorable, and it must be admitted that it is a favorable comment upon the management of our county affairs for the past year.

Oregon's Population.

The Telegram says that complete returns at the office of Supervisor Suksdorf show the population of Oregon to be 175,835, an increase in ten years of $4,412, or about 98 per cent. Multnomah has run up from 11,510 to 28,148, Josephine has doubled, Clatsop, Umatilla, and Wasco have quadrupled, Coos has trebled, while the remainder of the aggregate is made up by a trifle more than the average in the other counties east of the mountains, and a little below in the other counties in the valley.

CORRESPONDENCE.

ELLENSBURG, July 20, 1880.

ED. COAST MAIL.—A case of assault and battery occurred here the other day that was a temporary relief from the dull monotony that usually hangs over our little village. Between Hans and Barney there is a feud of long standing. They indulged in bickerings and back-bittings; they criticised each other's conduct minutely and mercilessly on most occasions; they sometimes stopped in the streets to bandy epithets.

Last Sunday morning, as Hans was rigged out for church, the intelligence reached him that Barney said that he (Hans) sung and acted like a Chinaman during divine service. This was more than Hans could bear, so he donned his war-paint. He was shaven and perfumed fresh from the barber shop; he was dressed in a suit of new clothes; his boots had been recently polished, but in his wrath and confusion he had inserted one of them into a mud-hole, and gone was the shine thereof; his shirt bosom glistened with starch and paste diamonds; he wore a "patent erection collar" around his neck, and a superabundance of cholera within his breast; and, above all, a plug hat which he had expressly ordered and just received from the city. So far as anybody knows here, it was the first plug hat that was ever seen in Ellensburg. Head erect like a steer in the corn, his majestic strides kept time with the booming breakers, as he bounded down the street.

"Have you seen anything of Barney?" Nobody had seen him since the day previous. "Do you think you could whip Barney?" "Whip him?" you stand him up before my pair of threshing machines and I'll pound him into pulp before he can say "God help me!" "They say Barney is a boxer." Never mind! I'll carve his back-bone out with a piece of hoop iron; let me raise one of my quart-crushers from the ground, and he'll lay on his beam ends for the next twenty-four hours."

And so saying, he marched on; his vertebrae as stiff as a mainmast, and his head thrown back like he was gazing at the stars.

About an hour after this a company of ladies and gentlemen were sitting in the parlor of the Cosmopolitan hotel enjoying a little sacred music. Almost any music sounds delectable on an organ; and to sit indoors on a damp Sunday morning when everybody wears a face as long as a mule's ear, and listen to the soothing strains of "Windham," or "Old Hundred," will throw a scum over the brightest countenance, and make one feel like having been "dipped in a pot of melancholy and touched by the fingers of Faith." Presently there was a low, plaintive moan at the door, and after some effort in turning the knob, there stepped into the room a wreck of humanity that looked as though he had just come out of the wrong end of a saw-mill. The ladies screamed, and fled from the room; the urbane landlord colly turned from the organ to his clerk, and said in a stern voice of command, "Put that man out." The right sleeve of his coat was torn out and gone; his vest was riddled and torn in shreds, as though it had been struck by lightning; large clots and stripes of blood besmeared his shirt-bosom; all that remained of his habiliments was dusty and bloody; the dust and blood had united in places and formed smeared mud, his whole face was dressed in mourning, one eye was swollen shut and the other nearly so; his nose was lopped over to one side and mashed flat to his face. The clerk was about to put him out the door, when he said, in a faint, piping voice: "Have I no friends in this company?" Everybody looked again, and it was Hans. There was nothing by which he could be identified except a moustache and the remnant of a plug hat, the beauty and glory of which was no more. He looked as if some strong giant had held him under a trip-hammer for an hour's diversion. "Hans, did you find Barney?" There was a weak nod of the head; and they stretched him out on a lounge and dressed his wounds.

A glass of Bob Walker's best port wine revived him, and he raised up and began to converse. "Where I came from," said Hans, "we usually settled disputes with shot-guns at ten paces; then, if there was any life left in either party, they came together and finished up with butcher's cleavers."

Presently Barney came along, looking as gentle, playful and innocent as if he had just dropped down from heaven. His toilet was in perfect order; there was not a scratch, nor a mark on him. The next morning Hans had Barney "look up" before Squire Trinkets. There were no witnesses except the two, and each pleaded his own case. Hans wept like a street-sprinkler while relating how Barney pounded him. Squire Trinkets fined Hans ten dollars for breaking the Sabbath. Barney was silent, but his brow belied him if his soul was sad.

Another Steamboat Horror.

We are called upon to record another shocking steamboat collision. On the night of the 24th instant, on the Detroit river, about nine miles below Detroit, the excursion steamer Garland, with 1,200 persons on board, under the auspices of the Detroit Moulders' Union, while going down the river collided with the steam yacht Mamie coming up, cutting her in two, so that she almost instantly sank. The latter had on board twenty-four persons, consisting mainly of Father Bleyenbergh, pastor of Trinity Roman Catholic Church of this city, and a number of acolytes and boys officiating in various capacities in the service of the church. They had been on an annual excursion to Monroe and were returning home. The night was bright moonlight, and there would seem to have been no earthly reason, save that of criminal negligence, why the accident should have occurred. Of those on board the Mamie, the following were drowned: Mrs. Fred Martin, wife of the engineer; Miss Lizzie Murphy, Miss Mary Hahn, domestic of the Trinity Church Parochial School; Frank Solan, John Howe, David Barry, John Donovan, Willie Cuddie, David Cuddy, John Cosgrove, James Toomey, Joseph Monaghan, all elder boys in the church, aged from eleven to fourteen. Thomas Kelley, church sexton; Jim Kelley, organ blower, and Andrew Doran, a boy who was invited to accompany the excursion, Thomas McLogan and another boy are missing, doubtless lost. Capt. Hoffman, Engineer Martin, Father Bleyenbergh, Miss Lizzie Dusean, of Monroe, and four others were saved. All parties reached this city about 2 o'clock this morning. No bodies have been recovered.

More Homicide.

On the 26th instant in the Mokaw valley, Lane county, J. R. Cartwright shot and instantly killed one Fred Maudie. The killing is said to be the result of a feud of long standing. Cartwright claims that he killed his enemy in self defense.

THE BROWNVILLE TRAGEDY.

The following are some of the particulars of the shooting of Richard Warren by Goodwin, at Brownville, last Saturday. The parties had high words, and drew weapons. Goodman struck Warren a heavy blow over the right eye, and when Warren turned to run, Goodman fired. The shot, from a large revolver, took effect in Warren's back, between the left shoulder blade and the spine, inflicting probably a mortal wound. Warren made his way to a private residence, crawling to the door, where he was found an hour after the shooting. Drs. Crawford and Cole were summoned, and made an examination of the wound, and administered to him. But slight hopes are entertained of Warren's recovery. Goodman gave himself up and is now under arrest. A preliminary examination was held yesterday. It is said that the immediate cause of the altercation was concerning a woman, as usual, backed by a plentiful supply of bad whisky.

On Saturday evening, the 17, a terrible accident befell Andrew Erskine while asleep in his bunk on Slate creek. Himself and boy pitched their tent beneath a large pine tree. His son asked him if he was not afraid the wind would blow it down, to which he replied: "No, my son, there is no danger." They retired to bed, the wind blowing a gale. Mr. Erskine was very tired, and soon fell asleep. The son being a little timid, remained awake. In about an hour he heard the tree commence to crack, and, springing out of bed, he tried to pull out the door, the tree cracking like pistol shots. The boy ran to the door just in time to see the tree coming upon him. He sprang away, and it fell directly across the tent. Hanging above Mr. Erskine was a cross-cut saw, which fell, striking him in the stomach, and the tree, falling upon it, cut the body in two, killing him instantly. He was buried next day by the miners.

An old gentleman named Sutherland drove into Oakland, Douglas county, one day last week, having in the "boot" of his buggy sundry private papers and $89 in silver, the latter tied up in true orthodox shape in a red bandana. He rode up under a shed, hitched up, and with malice toward none, with confidence in all, went about his business, supposing his valuables safe. After a time smoke was seen issuing from under the buggy seat, and an examination showed the coin gone and the papers incinerated.

ABOUT 9 o'clock Saturday night Geo. W. Walker and Dr. Goodman, a veterinary surgeon, met in Brownville and had a dispute in regard to a woman. Walker drew a pistol and shot at Goodman, but the ball did not hit the Doctor, who then drew a pistol and fired at Walker, the ball taking effect in the hip. The wound is not considered dangerous.

THE late Camas Prairie Indian scare proved to be a fraud; there has been no danger from Indians in that region.

On his way toward Louisville, he passed through Brownsboro, where he outraged and murdered a thirteen-year-old negro girl, throwing her body into a ravine. Vonderheide was captured in the vicinity.

VIRGINIA, July 22.—At 1:30 to day as Jerry Boverce and Nat Frock were running a power dail in the face of the north drift at the 2310 foot level of Alpha, the drill struck and exploded a charge of giant powder which was left unnoticed at the preceding blast. Boverce was injured so badly that he lived but 20 minutes, not long enough to be taken to the surface. Frock's face was filled with fine rock but his eyes are not much injured. He will recover.

CINCINNATI, July 26.—An unusual homicide occurred in the northwest part of the city this afternoon on an uninhabited street, upon which work house prisoners have been at work in a quarry. Paul Smith (colored), from Jackson, Tenn., who had just been discharged from the work house, went to this quarry to get a drink from a spring. While he was there John King, an Irish laborer who lives near, came up and began to abuse him. The quarrel was followed by stone throwing, and finally they came together when Smith threw King, and seizing his throat actually choked him to death. Smith gave himself up to the first officer he met.

Yaquina Bay.

From the following, which we take from the Astorian, it appears that the captain of the Shubrick has not a very favorable idea of the Yaquina harbor: The light-house tender, Shubrick, returned yesterday morning from her trip south to cape Blanco and all the light stations between here and there. On her way back she put into Yaquina bay and enjoyed a forced visit there of eleven days, being far bound there for that length of time. Capt. Everson thinks that the Architect of the universe never intended that a ship should enter that harbor or he would never have placed three reefs of jagged rocks directly across the entrance.
