The Poor Man's Eden.

To find a place to live at once comfortable and cheap is usually a vain search, for all travellers know as a rule, that the cheap places are not comfortable, and that comfortable places are not cheap. St. Mitchell, the largest of the Azores, seems to be an exception, from the account of an American, who has been spending some time at Ponta Delgada and Ribeira Grande, two considerable towns on that island. He calls it, on the whole, the best spot on earth, and the poor man's Eden. The soil is fertile, the climate healthful, mild and delightful, the scenery charming, and the inhabitants are noted for simplicity and kindness. Labor is very cheap and consequently the streets of the towns and roads leading there are kept very clean and in excellent order. Eggs can be bought for five cents per dozen; good beef for three cents a pound; fowls for twelve cents apiece, and comfortable dwellings hired for $7 a month. For $500 a year one can live well, for $700 handsomely, and for $1,000 superbly, keeping carriages and horses. The whole island is picturesque, containing many beautiful gardens, which are well taken care of. The land is owned by a few rich people, and rented at the rate of $50 to $80 an acre. The peasants perform all the labor in the country proper, go barefooted, and live so economically that $100 a year suffices for the expenses of a small family. The fashions in dress have not changed for a century, either among the upper or lower classes. The women wear capes and garments resembling the ulsters worn here by the other sex, and reaching the whole length of the figure. The head covering termed, a capilla, attached to the capotes, is like one of the old New England bonnets, and is pulled over the face when a stranger approaches. This natives never attempt to see the countenances of their friends, whom they recognize by their feet, looking down, not up, as they pass anybody on the street or on the road. St. Mitchell, which is about thirty miles wide, appears, indeed, to be a miniature paradise, at least for men of small means. It is very questionable, however, whether women would like it. How could they enjoy an island where fashions never change in a lifetime, and where only one sort of garment is worn? So much of the contemporaneous woman's time is occupied, in ordinary civilization, with taking off and putting on clothes, that she would suffer excessively at St. Mitchell for lack of congenial employment.

Gen. Kilpatrick in the Campaign.

An exchange mentions the speech of Gen. Kilpatrick at Lewiston, Me., on the 7th instant as follows: "Never since the war have the feelings of a Lewiston audience been aroused to such a pitch of enthusiasm as by the thrilling sentences of the dashing cavalry leader. He said the Democrats made their greatest blunder this year at Cincinnati. They forgot McClellan, threw Tilden overboard, kicked John Kelly out of the Convention, and nominated a man who killed 15,000 Democrats at Gettysburg. They tried running an unsuccessful soldier on a war platform in time of peace, and will be beaten. The Union soldier will not aim his bullets at Gen. Hancock, but at the banner he bears and the party that follows him." Gen. Kilpatrick's appeals to the soldiers, hundreds of whom were in the audience, were received with wild demonstrations of enthusiasm.

How a Clerk Made His Fortune

The withdrawal of the Rothschild agency from San Francisco through the retirement of Messrs. Gansel & Cullen, recalls an anecdote connected with the house of Rothschild, which illustrates the prompt manner in which the bankers deal with their employees. When the Rothschilds decided on establishing an agency on this coast they were for some time in doubts as to who should accompany Mr. Davidson, who was detailed for that purpose. Finally, Clerk No. 1, as we shall call him, was requested one morning to step into the manager's office. Presenting himself there, he was asked how long it would take him to prepare for a journey to California. He wished to know where California was, and how long he should be required to stay there. He was informed of the locality of the latter to unknown land, and that his residence there would be indefinite; and to take time to consider before answering. Pondering awhile, he replied that he should require a week to pack up and say farewell to his friends. "Very well," said the head of the house, "you will be informed should we decide on sending you," and so dismissed him. Clerk No. 2 was sent for, and the same questions asked, and he answered in like manner, and No. 3 summoned. On being questioned as to the time he required to prepare for the long journey, his reply was "I am ready now." "Very well," said the banker, "you sail to-morrow for San Francisco, where you will be junior partner in the house we are about to open there." The clerk, who was ready at a moment's notice to journey to the other side of the world, was Julius May; and he thus laid the foundation of his present fortune.

AGRICULTURAL.

THIN TOMATO CATSUP.—When tomato catsup becomes sour the solid part is separated from the acid and the latter floats above the former as a clear liquid. This may be poured off, if desired, and the thick part only used. But it is usually mixed by shaking the bottle when the catsup is used unless there is too much of it. If the catsup is heated to boiling the albumen of the thin portion is coagulated and separates, when the clear part may be poured off and thrown away.

PUTTING UP PICKLES.—The usual way to put up pickles is to pack them in salt until saturated; drain them from the liquor and wash them in clear water; pack them in barrels or kegs and cover with fresh brine. Keep them in this state until wanted for use, when they may be steeped in water for an hour or two, dried on a cloth, and put into pure acid vinegar, with such spice as may be desired. It will hasten the pickling and crisp the pickles if the vinegar is put on boiling hot.

If the crop is good one square rod of rye, clover, or good grass will feed a cow for one day. One square rod of corn fodder five feet high will feed two cows one day. The only secret about soiling is to have a succession of crops come in for cutting; for instance, winter rye is ready in April, then clover, then grass; after that, oats sown early; then early corn, late corn, millet, second crop clover, sugarbeets, and mangels. What is not eaten of these crops while green is cured for winter use. One acre of ground thus well managed and well manured will feed a cow the whole year.

Poultry may be forced by feeding them with oat-meal boiled in milk and given slightly warm. This may be given four times a day, and will make more rapid growth of flesh than any other food. For fat, some mutton suet may be chopped finely and mixed with it. But this sort of food is not healthful, and should only be used to feed for the table or for market. For natural growth a mixed food of corn, wheat, oats, and vegetables, as cabbage and onions, is doubtless the best under ordinary circumstances.

A law was enacted in Congress at the last session which provides that patentees who sue to recover penalties for alleged infringements upon their patents shall not recover costs unless the amount of the judgment in their favor is more than $20. This law is intended to protect farmers who may buy tools or implements from manufacturers or their agents which may be subject to some unknown claim from some patentee. As farmers cannot know of these claims, they should justly be relieved of all responsibility in the matter, and the manufacturer only be made liable. The new law, however, is a protection, inasmuch as it throws all the costs on the claimant, even if successful. Persons upon whom these frequent claims are made should, therefore, refuse to pay unjust charges, and let the parties make their claims before a court and pay their own costs.

THE HARRISBURG TELEGRAPH says: The following was copied verbatim from a note made in his pocket album by the late Judge Altee: "On the 24th of May, 1795, being at Hanover (York county, Penn.), in company with Chief-Justice McKean, Judge Bryan, Mr. Burd and others, on our way to Franklin, and taking a view of the town, in company with Mr. McKean, and seven other respectable inhabitants, we went to Mr. Neece's tannery, where we were shown a place near the currying-house from whence (in digging to sink a tan-vat) some years ago were taken two skeletons of human bodies. They lay close beside each other, and measured about 11 feet 3 inches in length; the bones are entire, but on being taken up and exposed to the air they presently crumbled and fell to pieces. Mr. McKean, who is a tall man, about 6 feet 4 inches high, mentioned that the principal bone of the leg of one of them, being placed by the side of his leg, reached from his ankle a considerable way up his thigh, pointing a small distance below the hip bone."

Organizing South.
A late Washington dispatch has the following: It is reported that unusual activity is manifested all over the South in organizing the militia under the State law. The Adjutant-General of North Carolina is traveling over the State engaged in this work. A few days ago, at a public meeting, he gave as one reason why these companies should be organized that there might be another dispute over the Presidential election such as occurred in 1876, when they could be used to good advantage. These companies are, as a rule, taking the names and officers which they had when they existed as town companies before the war, and under which they went into the rebel army. The militia law now allows them to draw arms from the Government, which they are doing. The ex-Confederates are thus being put on a good war-footing again, such as they have not enjoyed since Lee's surrender.
