Feeble-Minded Children.

Philadelphia Press. We sympathize deeply with the poor mother who writes to us concerning her gentle, afflicted child.

Dr. Seguin's theory was that idiosyncrasy is prolonged infancy, and that any treatment that would increase the bodily and mental functions would improve the child.

It is perhaps needless to say the brigade pushed on mutton that evening. As the army was crossing South mountain the day before the battle of Antietam, General McClellan rode along the side of the moving column.

"Well, and how is the Old Fifth this evening?" "First-rate, general," replied one of the Zouaves.

"Supposition?" said the general, in a puzzled tone. "What do you mean by that?"

"It's easily explained, sir. You see we expected to get our rations yesterday, but as we didn't, we're living on the supposition that we did."

"Ah, I understand; you shall have your rations, Zou-Zou, to-night," replied the general, putting spurs to his horse to escape the cheers of his regiment.

"Ke-ee-me some more." An American naval officer who had spent some considerable time in China narrates an amusing experience of the ignorance of the Chinese maiden of the custom of kissing.

Electrifying Animals. The latest application of electricity is an invention made in the interest of lion-tamers, which consists of an apparatus of great power shaped like a stick, about three feet and a half in length.

The publishers complain that there is absolutely no demand for the "Campaign Life of Grover Cleveland." The people know there is nothing good in it, hence they have no use for it.

Humors of the Battle-Field.

[From the Century.] Many humorous incidents occurred on battle-fields. A confederate colonel ran ahead of his regiment at Malvern hill, and discovering that the men were not following him as closely as he wished, he uttered a fierce oath, and exclaimed: "Come on! Do you want to live forever?"

The appeal was irresistible, and many a poor fellow who had laughed at the colonel's queer exhortation laid down his life soon after.

A shell struck the wheel of a federal field-piece toward the close of the engagement at Fair Oaks, and, shivering the spokes, dismantled the cannon.

"Well, isn't it lucky that didn't happen before we used up all our ammunition," remarked one of the artillerymen as he crawled from beneath the gun.

When General Pope was falling back before Lee's advance in the Virginia valley, his own soldiers thought his bulletins and orders somewhat strained in their rhetoric.

At one of the numerous running engagements that marked that disastrous campaign, a private in one of the western regiments was mortally wounded by a shell.

Seeing the man's condition, a chaplain knelt beside him, and opening his Bible at random read out Samson's slaughter of the Philistines with the jaw-bone of an ass.

He had not quite finished when, as the story runs, the poor fellow interrupted the reading by saying: "Hold on, chaplain. Don't deceive a dying man. Isn't the name of John Pope signed to that?"

A column of troops was pushing forward over the long and winding road in Thoroughfare gap to head off Lee after his retreat across the Potomac at the close of the Gettysburg campaign.

Suddenly the signal officer who accompanied the general in command discovered that some of his men, posted on a high hill in the rear, were reporting the presence of a considerable body of confederate troops on top of the bluffs to the right.

A halt was at once sounded, and the leading brigade ordered forward to uncover the enemy's position. The regiments were soon scrambling up the steep incline, officers and men gallantly racing to see who could reach the crest first.

A young lieutenant and some half dozen men gained the advance, but at the end of what they deemed a perilous climb, they were thrown into convulsions of laughter at discovering that what the signal men took for confederate troops were only a tolerably large flock of sheep.

As the leaders in this forlorn hole rolled on the grass in a paroxysm of merriment, they laughed all the louder at seeing the pale but determined faces of their comrades, who, of course, came up fully expecting a desperate hand-to-hand struggle.

It is perhaps needless to say the brigade pushed on mutton that evening. As the army was crossing South mountain the day before the battle of Antietam, General McClellan rode along the side of the moving column.

Over-taking a favorite Zouave regiment, he exclaimed with his natural bonhomie: "Well, and how is the Old Fifth this evening?"

"First-rate, general," replied one of the Zouaves. "But we'd be better off if we weren't living so much on supposition."

"Supposition?" said the general, in a puzzled tone. "What do you mean by that?"

"It's easily explained, sir. You see we expected to get our rations yesterday, but as we didn't, we're living on the supposition that we did."

BRILLIANTS.

The liberal are secure alone; For what we frankly give forever is our own. —(Granville.)

Cursed be the social wants that sin against the strength of youth! Cursed be the social lies that warp us from the living truth! —(Tommyson.)

Why did I never sing a song to you? Dear! To you, again, behold the question start. To mine own pulses have I ever sung? Or do I read a rhyme unto my boasting heart? —(Elizabeth Stuart Phelps.)

Oh, friendly to the best pursuits of man, Friendly to thought, to virtue and to peace, Domestic life in rural leisure passed! Few know thy value, and few taste thy sweet. —(Cowper.)

HOW GLOBES ARE BUILT.

The Process of Making Library and School Globes. (Scientific American.) Our library and school educational globes have perhaps been a puzzle to many an inquisitive mind.

The material of a globe is a thick, pulpy paper like soft straw board, and this is formed into two hemispheres from disks. A flat disk is cut in gorges, or radial pieces, from center to circumference.
