Just received, at the X. L. N. T. cash store, a large assortment of clothing; also, a fine lot of children's cloaks, at very low prices. Call and see them.

The ladies' home missionary society will meet at the residence of Mrs. T. G. Owen today (Thursday, October 30), at 2 p. m. Mrs. T. G. OWEN, Secretary.

The Sunday school association of Mother chapel, South Coos river, have purchased R. L. Agers' organ for the school. They got a good instrument cheap.

Another layer of planks has been placed upon the wharf in front of the X. L. N. T. store and the Marshfield drug store that greatly improves it, in appearance and otherwise.

Nasburg & Hirst have the best assortment of clothing kept in this town, and they are selling it at less than cost, to make room for their fall and winter stock. For cheap and durable clothing, go to them.

The planking of the east side of Front street by John Kenyon, in front of his residence, where the ways were, is a decided improvement that belated pedestrians traveling that way of dark nights will appreciate.

Rev. G. W. Black has received intelligence from the Baptist missionary board of his transfer from this place to Gardiner, for which field he expects to depart in a couple of weeks. This field will be left in charge of Rev. C. P. Bailey.

Capt. Holt of the Arcata expected to sail for San Francisco yesterday morning, but the steamer grounded in Coal-bank slough Tuesday, where she was detained until yesterday, which has delayed her departure until 7 o'clock this morning.

Hon. S. H. Hazard and Rev. W. Lund left the bay yesterday morning for Port Orford and Ellensburg, Curry county. Rev. Lund will preach at Ellensburg next Sunday. On his return, he will preach at Coquille City next Thursday night.

Mrs. M. Tower has given up the house so long occupied by her at Empire, and she has taken rooms at the residence of H. Bennett and Miss Jennie Mark took place at the residence of the bride's parents in this place on the evening of the 23d inst., in the presence of the family and a few invited guests. A few minutes after the ceremony had been performed the Marshfield brass band appeared in the street in front of the residence and serenaded the couple, after which the members of the band were invited into the house to partake of a sumptuous repast prepared for the occasion.

Suffrage and Elections.

For the benefit of those whom it may concern we quote the following from Article II. of our state constitution:

Section 2. In all elections not otherwise provided for by this constitution, every male citizen of the United States, of the age of 21 years and upwards, who shall have resided in the state during the six months immediately preceding such election—and every male of foreign birth of the age of 21 years and upwards, who shall have resided in this state during the six months immediately preceding such election, and shall have declared his intention to become a citizen of the United States one year preceding such election, conformably to the laws of the United States on the subject of naturalization, shall be entitled to vote at all elections authorized by law.

Sec. 3. No idiot or insane person shall be entitled to the privileges of an elector, and the privilege of an elector shall be forfeited by a conviction of any crime which is punishable by imprisonment in the penitentiary.

Sec. 4. For the purpose of voting, no person shall be deemed to have gained or lost a residence by reason of his presence or absence while employed in the service of the United States or of this state; nor while engaged in the navigation of the waters of this state or of the United States, or of the high seas; nor while a student of any seminary of learning, nor while kept at any almshouse or other asylum at public expense, nor while confined in any public prison.

Sec. 13. In all cases, except treason, felony and breach of the peace, electors shall be free from arrest in going to elections, during their attendance there and in returning from the same.

Sec. 17. All qualified electors shall vote in the election precinct in the county where they may reside for county officers, and in any county in the state for state officers, or in any county of a congressional district in which such elector may reside for member of congress.

We construe this last section as entitling qualified electors to vote for presidential electors in any county of this state in which they may be on election day.

Enthusiastic Republican Meeting.

Hon. C. B. Watson last night addressed a large and enthusiastic ratification meeting in Norman's hall.

The speaker was met at Utter City yesterday afternoon by a deputation of members of the Blaine and Logan club, who accompanied him to town on the steamer Myrtle. The Marshfield brass band was in attendance on the dock and choice music was discoursed. In the evening the street in front of the hall was illuminated by a large bonfire, and the firing of anvils added to the general enthusiasm. The hall and platform were tastefully decorated with flags and the speaker was introduced by Dr. O. E. Smith, president of the Blaine and Logan club. Watson spoke for some time upon the leading issues of the campaign and the audience listened with attention. The affair was a decided success and altogether the most enthusiastic meeting of the campaign.

Wednesday night of last week Martin Welch and Michael Lander, two miners, became involved in an altercation at Newport, in which Welch stabbed Lander in the back with a knife. Whiskey was the cause—either too much or not enough of it. The story is that Lander took two or three bottles of whiskey from this place to Newport and divided with Welch, who soon consumed his portion and then called upon Lander for more. The latter's refusal to divide again so incensed Welch that he manifested an inclination to make mince-meat of his friend, and probably would have done so had not outsiders interfered and stopped the fight. Dr. Tower and Marshal Rhodes were sent for and went up. The doctor took charge of the wounded man and the marshal took charge of Welch and brought him to town and put him in jail. Lander's injuries did not prove of a serious nature and he was soon on his pins again, packing pocketfuls of whiskey to Newport. He refused to appear against Welch and the latter was turned loose.

The many friends of A. M. Crawford, Esq., were glad to welcome him back to the bay by last steamer, after a visit of some four months at his old home in New York state. He is looking splendid, and as if he had a good time in the east. J. N. Crawford, A. M.'s younger brother, accompanied him on his return, with the intention of remaining here. They left Percy Levar at St. Paul, Minn., and came via the Central Pacific. Percy expected to return via the Northern Pacific, and is liable to put in an appearance this week.

Henry Hudson and wife returned from Yaquina bay to their home in this place last Sunday. They came by the steamer Coos Bay and are both in the enjoyment of excellent health. Their numerous friends were delighted to see them, and the members of the Marshfield brass band evinced their gratification by turning out and serenading Mr. and Mrs. Hudson Sunday evening.

R. E. Scanton put in 2100 logs for the North Bend mill before shutting down his logging camp this season at the Harner place on Catching slough. The logs averaged about 900 feet each. There is timber enough for another season's work at this camp.

Master Bob Merchant is a student at the Bishop Scott grammar school at Portland. The discipline of the school is a trifle stricter than the schools here, but Bob expresses himself as well pleased with the place.

Death of a Notable Woman.

The Oregonian announces the death of Mrs. Eloisa Harvey at Portland last Friday.

Mrs. Harvey was the daughter of Dr. John McLoughlin, the first chief factor and governor of the Hudson bay company west of the Rocky mountains. Her mother was the widow of the celebrated Alexander McKay, the partner of John Jacob Astor in the Tonquin expedition to the mouth of the Columbia river in 1811, which resulted in the founding of Astoria.

Mrs. Harvey was born February 13, 1817, at Fort William, in what is now the province of Toronto, Canada, where her father was then employed as a physician to the Northwest for company. Upon the union of this company with the Hudson bay her father was appointed governor of the latter on this side of the mountains, and came here overland in 1841, bringing his daughter Eloisa with him.

In 1838 Miss McLoughlin was married at Vancouver to William Glen Rao of the Hudson bay company, by whom she had three children; and of these Mrs. Theodore Wygant and Mrs. Joseph Myrick are still living and residents of Portland. In 1840 Mr. and Mrs. Rao went on the company's steamer Beaver to Stikineen, in Alaska, and took charge of the company's post there. In 1841 they returned, Mrs. Wygant being born on the down trip of the steamer, and proceeded to San Francisco, California, then called Yerba Buena, and took charge of the company's post there until 1845, when Rao died. The widow returned to Oregon, where she lived with her father until his death in 1857. In October, 1850, she married Daniel Harvey, by whom she had three children, Daniel Harvey, Mrs. D. F. Leady and James W. McL. Harvey, who are now living in Portland. In 1867 Mr. and Mrs. Harvey removed from Oregon City to Portland, and in 1868 she was again left a widow.

Mrs. Harvey was an interesting woman of great force of character, and in many ways reminded one of her noble father—"The old doctor." Those who knew her best held her in the highest esteem, and among the early settlers she will always be remembered with kindness and respect.

She saw this country transformed from a wilderness to a prosperous and civilized state. After three-score years of exemplary and faithful life spent on its wave-washed shores, she has lain down to rest in its bosom, in the blessed hope of the final resurrection with the just.

Mrs. Harvey was buried at Portland last Sunday, from Trinity church, of which she was a communicant.

Hume's Rogue River Fishery.

[Gold Beach Gazette.]

We visited the upper part of town the other day, and are pleased to note the extensive preparations being made by Hume for the new hatchery, with which he proposes to propagate salmon to put in Rogue river.

A reservoir about 100 feet square and 10 feet deep, for holding the old fish, is being constructed by excavating to the bed rock, west of the point at the mill, the bottom of which will be below low water mark, and will be so arranged as to be supplied with water by the tides or by the Indian creek ditch. The whole will be surrounded by a concrete wall 12 feet at the highest point, 5 feet thick at the base and about 2 feet at the top. The capacity of the hatchery, when completed, will be one million of young salmon per year.

Wishing to learn something of the methods of hatching, the habits of salmon and the fishing interests of Rogue river in general, we sought Hume, whom we found at leisure, and willing to converse on the subject.

"Has the result of your previous efforts to propagate fish been satisfactory, Hume?" we asked. "Very satisfactory, indeed. My efforts at hatching heretofore were more of an experiment than an effort to keep up the supply, and though the appliances used were rather crude, I have put more fish in the river than have been taken out since I have been in business here. An account of every fish that has been caught since I came here has been kept, and I know that I am correct."

"What are the facilities for propagating fish here, compared with other places?" "They are better than at any other place on the coast. The fish from which the spawn is taken at other places are bruised, and worn-out with a long journey over falls and rapids, while the fish that have been and will be used hereafter at my hatchery are taken fresh from the salt water, are sound and healthy, and of course their spawn will produce healthier fish. Then, the fish that have been used here for the purpose of propagating are returned to the water, live and come back the next year. This fact has been established by marking the fish returned to the river and catching them again in one and two years thereafter. Prof. Baird, one of the United States fish commissioners, informed me that this is the only instance known where fish from which spawn had been removed had lived. The salmon in Rogue river are a very strong, hardy fish, and have no equal on this coast. As the river is shallow and rapid, having an average fall of 10 feet per mile, the fish are very shy and none but the strongest ever reach the spawning grounds. They are also far superior in flavor to any other fish."

"Is it a fact that the salmon that are hatched out always return to their native stream when they are old enough?" "Yes, I think there is no doubt of that; at least I have come to that conclusion after years of study and investigation. That is also the opinion of those who have made the habits of the salmon a study. I will wager you the cigars that the salmon that are hatched out at my place will when they are old enough, which will be in about four years, return and try to jump into their old home at the reservoir. I propose to hatch out and put into the river every year hereafter a million of young salmon. This can be done about as easy and cheap as to turn out half or one-third that number."

"How does the Sunday law, as it is called, affect you? Do you not think it is a protection to fish?" "No, I don't consider that the law protects the fish to any great extent. Of course it injures us all a little, but not much. The fishermen complain the most during the spring season, for they have to take their nets out during the afternoons of Saturdays and keep them out till after sunset on the Sunday following. This is quite a loss to them when the fish are plentiful. I don't think that there can be any law passed short of prohibition that will protect salmon; in fact, such a law is unnecessary, as the fish continue to come in and go up the river for weeks after the spring fishing is over, and for two months after fall fishing. About the only way the legislature can help us to keep up the supply is to make a liberal appropriation to construct and operate a hatchery on the river, somewhere near tide water. But, as the saying is, 'The Lord helps those that help themselves,' and I propose to go ahead and put in more fish, hereafter, than I take out, without waiting for aid from the state."

The fishing interest of Rogue river is a matter of no little importance, not only to Hume, but to all the people of the river, and all should feel a deep interest in its continued success. Hume has had perhaps as much experience in salmon fishing as any person in the state, and as he is especially interested in keeping the river well stocked with fish, and is a gentleman who spares neither pains nor money to accomplish anything he undertakes, there is but little doubt that he will soon have a full-fledged hatchery in active operation, to add to his already extensive improvements.

The law for the protection of fish and game takes effect day after tomorrow, when it will be unlawful, until after the 1st of July next, to hunt, kill or destroy any male deer or buck, and during the months of November, December, January, February and March of each year it is unlawful to take or have anything to do with mountain or brook trout. The penalty for a violation of the law is a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $50, or imprisonment for not less than five days nor more than three months, or both fine and imprisonment. Half the fines go to the informers and half to the prosecuting attorney.

Yaquina Bay Items.

To the Editor of the COAST MAIL:

This place presents a lively appearance just now. The steamer Wilmington and several schooners are discharging iron and ties for the O. F. R. R. Co. The tug Favorite has been kept busy lately. She is commanded by Capt. Disoway, an able and careful pilot. Capt. Winant having gone to the city. Vessels of all classes have been crossing the bar without trouble, 20 feet being the average depth of water.

The recent rains have made the roads almost impassable, and mails are delayed, some, but as the railroad company is pushing the work along as fast as the weather will permit, we will soon have communication with San Francisco and Portland second to none.

West Yaquina has begun to make a showing. The dock is nearly completed and several buildings are under way. It is nicely located, lots sell at a reasonable price, and it is likely to be a place of importance. The land on the east side is owned by the railroad company and has a strong metallic smell, which most people don't like. Another drawback is, it has no hotels, or lodging houses for travelers to rest their weary bones. They have to pass on to Newport, or reduce themselves for the election races.

Toledo, 12 miles above here, is beginning to show some signs of life, after slumbering for years. Several buildings are going up and it looks like a new place. It is the depot for the Siliz country and reservation.

The government tug Gen. Wright can be seen every day towing great barges of rock from this place for the work at the mouth of the bay, which is being done in a substantial manner.

Elk City, at the head of navigation, has the railroad fever, too, but it is too far from Oysterville to be of much importance. I may say here, Oysterville has increased one since the last trip of the Coos Bay. H. H. Oysterville, October 23, 1884.

Death of Solomon Fitzhugh.

[Southwest Oregon Recorder, Oct. 21.]

Late last Saturday evening the community was shocked with the intelligence that but an hour before Hon. Solomon Fitzhugh had breathed his last at the residence of his son, George Fitzhugh. While he had been in feeble health for some time, his sudden death was unlooked for, as during the day he had been in attendance at and took an active part in a school meeting, and betrayed no evidence of his approaching dissolution. About 8 o'clock he retired and soon was apparently asleep, but Mrs. Rolls, a daughter, observed an irregularity in his breathing, neared the bedside, and discovered that the end was drawing nigh. Without recovering consciousness, and with no perceptible tremor or unusual movement, the spark of life fled. Yesterday at 3 o'clock the funeral procession followed to the last resting place all that was mortal of Hon. Solomon Fitzhugh.

Brig. Gen. John Newton, chief of engineers, arrived at Portland last week, on a tour of inspection of the government engineering work in this department. We hope the gentleman will extend his observations to the works at the Coos bay and Coquille bars. It could do no harm, and might do a great deal of good. So long as these works are of sufficient importance to receive appropriations, they should be looked after by some one above the man in local charge.

Many trees one foot in diameter have been successfully transplanted into the capitol grounds at Washington. A year before removal the large roots were cut off about four feet from the stump. Within this circle many new feeding roots put out, so that the trees were well provided with working rootlets, ready to take hold of the soil in their new location.

G. W. Cooley has sold his ranch and mines at Ophir beach, Curry county, to E. D. Phelps and Harry Richard, the consideration being $7500.

J. R. Cleaves of this place was at Canyonville, Douglas county, last week, where, says the Plaindealer, he expected to remain two weeks.

Salt salmon were quoted in San Francisco last week at $6.67 for barrels and $2.50 for half barrels.

Half the peppermint used in the world is said to be raised in St. Joseph county, Mich. The crop is cultivated with hoe and plow, cut with a scythe in August, packed and tramped down in large wooden tubs, a cover fastened on, steam turned in from the bottom through a tin pipe, steam, impregnated with essence, carried from the top in another pipe, where it is condensed and carried through a worm into a tub of water, and the oil is then separated. An acre yields from 15 to 25 pounds of oil, worth from $2 to $2.50 per pound.

The woman who churns in the Holy Land works it after this fashion: She pours the milk into a sheepskin bag which is suspended by a rope from the ceiling. Then she attacks the bag and swings it against one wall of the chamber and flings it on the rebound against another until the cream is mailed into butter. And no doubt the product of this warfare between the woman and the sheepskin brings a better price in the Jerusalem market than would a Darlingdon print.

"The English cheese" we read about doesn't seem to be made exclusively in England. A late parliamentary paper places the value of cheese imported into the united kingdom during 1883 at $24,452,000.
