The Griswood Case Again. There are probably few men in Oregon, says the Oregonian, who have not heard of the celebrated W. C. Griswold case, and there are a still less number who would not be content to hear the last of it. But it seems as if there is little hope of the end of it being reached in this generation. An effort is now being made to have the unsatisfied balance on the judgment recovered by the United States against Griswold, amounting to $21,915, compromised by the payremains the same, and those who desire a good article will find it at the old stand. the government has already received from Griswold much more than he swindled the government out of and that he is impoyarished, and that it is persecution to proceed further against him. of his pound of flesh.

[Jacksonville Sentinel.] Lewis McDaniel, an old settler of this county, was found in a dying condition in the road leading to his residence in Ashland last Thursday night about o'clock. The appearance indicated that he had been shot by some party unknown while on his way home, the top of his head being blown off by what appeared to be a shot from a gun. When discovered he was just breathing his last and could not tell who shot him or for what cause. A man named O'Neill has been arrested on suspicion and is being held to await developments. Mc-Daniels was something like 48 years of age, married, and was generally supposed to be well fixed in worldly goods.
All kinds of rumors are affoat as to what might have been the cause of the murder.

Hogs, alive and dressed, are going into the Portland market in large quantities, principally from the southern and eastern portions of the state, and as a ing. The Oregonian of the 4th says the best of dressed hogs now bring 6 cents load of material had been elevated to Hogan. He received $600 reward from per pound, and on the 3d a large lot the fourth story, Nuegland, against oft-wells, Fargo & Co., $450 his per cent of repeated advice of his fellow workmen, the stolen money received from Todd Dayton, W. T., one weighed 600 pounds, as heavy. But few farmers throughout the Willamette valley have disposed of elevator went with him, a distance of their hogs yet as the low price of wheat 60 feet, smashing it to splinters. Every lucky strikes. Hogan has been sheriff selves very much at home. In a brief induces them to feed their hogs as long beholder expected that Nuegland would space of time they had the dining-room as they can and make them as heavy as be killed by the fall, but he picked himliterally full of tables, spread with a possible. Even at the low prices ruling tempting array of good things to eat, for pork, hog raising is moderately rewhile other portions of the house were munerative, owing to cheap feed. but was not hurt. But a moment after crowded with as jolly a company as Cheap flour, cheap potatoes, cheap lard, he staggered and fell to the ground, inbacon and bams, although unpleasant substantial, consisting of a purse of $35, for the farmer, are very pleasant for the and the injured man taken to his lodgconsumer, these hard times.

The business of the United States land office at Roseburg last month consisted of 19 homestead entries, embracing 21, 814 acres; 10 final homestead entires, of 1580 acres; 18 pre-emption filings; 1 timber entry, and 1088 acres sold for cash.

represented, and herein lies the swindle. The trees, of course, are raised in Oregon, and are not worth over 10 or 15 cents aplece, whereas from 30 to 40 cents have been charged for them. The manner of working is so crude that it is a wonder any one is victimized; but where people are entirely unsuspecting and have no thought of guilte, they are deceived. The swindlers had no papers, not even cards that they might have had printed anywhere, to show that they were from Brighton, N. Y., but only their own statement to that effect. The list of trees which they presented were always written, and in lead-pencil at that, while the names of some of the varieties were so fantastical that an ordinarily well posted man would almost certainly have suspected them of being concected for the occasion. C. B. Gray, a farmer living near Mt. Tabor, was the first to suspect Snelling, and in 30 head of stock cattle. order to satisfy himself he wrote to the Brighton nurseries and received from the owner of that place the following letter: "I would say in reply to yours that I have no agent in Gregon, and that J. R. Snelling is a fraud and has no connection with our nursery. Please inform your neighbors, and give the fellow a warm reception on sight." Subsequent complaints show that Snelling

Caught and Bound Over. We made mention in our last of the fact that some culprit had run off with horse off to a man residing near Corval-lis. He still clung to the new horse, this office. But Teller failed to tell why, under his agency, he traded the horse off, nor could be explain who this man was that had employed him to take the horse, nor why he, without leave or license, took the saddle out of Singleton's barn. He was held in the sum of $500 bail to await the action of the next grand jury, in default of which he lingers in jail.

> A shrewd, prosperous old farmer of the bachelor persuasion, named James Howes, who resides a short distance back of East Portland, was robbed a fow days since in rather a singular manner. Howes, having no wife to guard his property in his absence, is in the habit of hiding his money in various out-of-the-way places. A fellow came along who had a saddle and two crosscut saws, which he wished to dispose of. He "marked them down" so low that Howes at last agreed to purchase, and going into an outhouse where, from a pile of potato sacks, he dug up a roll of silver, out of which he paid for the articles. The tramp "marked down" the place where the money was hid and went off. Next day Howes received a payment of $100, which he stowed away among the sacks. The building was a strong one and well provided with locks and was deemed secure; but the next night some one came along with a little augur, and by boring about 100 holes cut out a "man-hole," through which he entered and bore away the coin in triumph.

On the afternoon of the 3d inst, a man named John Nuegland met with a frightnatural consequence prices are weaken- ful fall at Kansa's block, in course of construction in Portland. Just as a recklessly stepped upon the elevator live weight, and two others were nearly saying, "Here we go." His weight caused the rope to break, and down the this arrest.
