Her Tam o' Shanter.

Come, saddle Peppers, my steed, I sing about my lady fair. About her Tam o' Shanter.

We called one day across the bay, In bright summer weather. They were the loveliest of the fair, They were by hair together.

And when she wants to work a spell, This kind of work is just the thing. As through the little town they ride, They catch it and keep it to this day.

An Oregon Boy in Germany. Clyde Cook, a Salem boy who has developed quite a genius as an artist, and who has been in Germany for a considerable time, engaged in study.

You speak of copying some of the good pictures to which I have access. Probably I could make something at it, but I think copying is more of a hindrance than a benefit.

My friend Wenzel used to give me advice lectures on general principles, and I said some that he boys admitted that I had talent (said to me), and that if I would develop my resources I would make more of myself than most of the Americans.

Seven thousand dollars' worth of fine cows have been killed in one county in Ohio by being fed on dry sorghum leaves. They had every symptom of mineral poisoning.

my duties to the entire satisfaction of the club, in recognition of which they had elected me a member of the board. Laurie had 27 votes, I had 21, Thompson 20, Wenzel 19, and Kappes 17.

A Bit of History. A recent number of the Los Angeles Times has the following bit of history in relation to pioneer days in Oregon.

By the politeness of Judge Thomas H. Smith we have been permitted to examine the census of Oregon, taken by himself in 1854, about forty years ago. Oregon at that time contained the present state of Oregon, the territories of Washington, Idaho and that part of Wyoming and Montana west of the Rocky mountains.

Well, this is terrible weather. To-day I trudged off, through the long, muddy lane, to the pasture long ago closely plucked. Soon the cold rain began to pour down, and long before I had got half enough to eat, I began to patter on my back, and now, as I return to the muddy barnyard, a driving snow almost blinds me.

Does some one individual carry the disease into the meeting and impart it to his fellows? Is not inebriety rather spontaneous in its origin, or may we not say that it is mutually contagious? Without running the risk of starting discussion, psychological or physiological, we may, we think, set down the contagiousness of inebriety as purely mental.

A good story was told at the Seville house in Waterbury, yesterday, during the settlement of a number of election bets. During the Polk campaign much interest was taken in Waterbury in the result, and party strife ran high between whigs and democrats.

For curiously named clergy Philadelphia takes the cake. The latest reported is the Rev. John G. Tea. It looks as though his middle name might be Green.

Johnny and the Bee. Careless little Johnny sat upon a bush today, And 'twas not a wonder that He rose quite hurriedly.

HE ENJOYED HIS WALTZES. How a Clever Young Thief Robbed His Partner in the Dance. Com plaints were made by the young ladies who attended the ball of the Paul S. Jones association at Rutherford hall.

The Narrow Walk. Just wide enough for two to walk; Just close enough for two to talk; And never room for three.

Two Cautious Women. "All women are alike in their fear of the cars," said an Illinois Central conductor. "They carry their caution to absurd extremes."

He Forgot to Ask. A good story was told at the Seville house in Waterbury, yesterday, during the settlement of a number of election bets.

A western editor who was a little short of type and also rather lazy, made an item in which he spoke of a new arrival at the hotel as "Mrs. Rawly, the young widow from Plattville, and her brother, Colonel 'buck'."
