John C. Weaver, the boy drowned with his father in Hayne's slough on the 22d of last month, was found last Tuesday, about noon, by Herman Larsen, son of Julius Larsen, who was on his way to North Bend in a small boat.

The body had drifted into the Miller branch of Hayne's slough, and at the time it was found it was about four miles from the place where the man and boy are supposed to have been drowned. It was floating in the water feet down, with only a small portion of the head and hair above the surface.

When young Larsen first discovered the body he thought it was a waterfowl of some description, but upon a nearer approach he perceived it to be the corpse of a boy nearly his own size and age. He placed a line around the neck of the corpse, towed it to a stake, and tied it there, after which he went to Weaver's place at Goose point and reported the finding of the body. Parties then went do a favor by leaving the same at this after it and it was brought to this place Tuesday evening and buried here yes

The body was considerably swollen, but otherwise it was in as good a state of preservation as could have been expected after remaining in the water so ong. The bent and rigid condition of one arm indicated that the boy had held to the boat while life lasted.

Parties immediately went in search of the remains of the father, which they expect to find somewhere in the vicinity of where those of the boy were found.

Young Larsen, who found the boy, is a lad 16 years old, and possessed of good courage, to alone take charge of the corpse, as he did. He was also one of the first to discover the boat after the drowning of the man and boy. The boat had then drifted to a point opposite Weaver's residence on Hayne's slough, and young Larsen was coming by there, when he assisted in reclaiming the boat, Coos Bay Wagon Road Items.

Jas. Laird of Sitkum, the mail contractor and the boss jehu of the Coes bay wagon road, was on the bay last Saturday and Sunday, looking after this business end of his route.

The heavy rains of this winter have damaged the road considerably, but Laird took home with him a quantity of powder and fuse to begin the blasting and removal of the large bowlders that have been washed from the hillsides into the road running through the canyon.

So far this winter there has been very little snow on the road between Coos City and Roseburg, and with two or three exceptions the mails have been carried through the canyon.

The mail service between the bay and Roseburg has been better conducted under Laird this winter than it ever was before. He has come through on time every trip and brought the mail every time that if was brought to him at Rose-burg. The fallure or wast matter to reach this place has been due to the de-ance with the preceding conversation, and Arthur pronounced the document entirely satisfactory. It was to be circulated in public or private, then or at a later day. Hawley then discussed the matter with Chairman Jones, and either Elkins or Chaffee, and an agreement was reached that the subject might as well be temporarily dropped, as in a fortnight there might be more value in something of the kind. Hawley so reported to Arthur, and so far as the former was concerned nothing further was done in the matter.

Hawley concludes as follows: "The campaign is over, and the republicans are defeated. I respectfully submit that profitable. The republican national committee worked with most admirable zeal and energy, and I doubt not that the party is fully conscious that it was deeply in earnest in the desire to do exactly the right things. Always considering the difficulties that develop themselves, the result was a splendid demonstration of the vitality of the republihis purposes, he said: 'One thing I do mean to do; I mean to make it possible for the republican party to carry the election in 1884.' I think he did that. Let us have peace."
