A NEGRO CAMP-MEETING.

A Flery Exhortation - Derge-Like Singing-The Holy Dance.

(Mary A. Denison's Florida Letter.)

After dinner it was arranged by a few among the crowd to go to a camp-meeting, which was held about a mile from the house.

There were no seats, the people were standing, reclining on the ground, and in some instances kneeling.

The preacher, the principal delights of that region seeming to consist in having no work to do, no corn to shuck, no tapers to hoe, no cotton to pick, and the halcyon days were correspondingly intended.

And so, to a waiting, derge-like tune, I did not hear any very cheerful music, but all about the air sadness, no matter what the words were.

Presently the sexes separated, the men standing off in a circle, the women massing together, led by a tall crane of most unearthly countenance, her hair carried up from her temples to a point, two long tucks falling over her lower lip, and growing longer every time she opened her mouth.

A Humiliating Confession.

(Boston Globe.)

At a convention of pilots, held in New York, Capt. Bedford Pim of the Royal British navy made an address, in which he stated that out of a total of 20,000 English vessels now afloat, casualties, resulting in 3,000 vessels annually. He finds, as a reason for this remarkable fact, that especially in the case of steamers, the vessels are built with a too great proportion of length for the width.

Insurance Troubles.

(The Current.)

The insurance agents are in gloom. They vow they will go out of business. Look at their troubles from their point of view: At the present rate of destruction by fire the losses of 1884, threaten to amount to $800,000,000.

Growing Pineapples.

(Boston Budget.)

Pineapples are thus grown in Brazil: As the fruit ripens in January, the young suckers from the roots are taken off in April or May and planted in newly-cleared fields at a distance of one and a half to two feet apart, the strongest producing fruit the following year.

Another Field.

(Philadelphia Call.)

Visitor (to the Indian school)—So all these children are Indians?

Teacher—Yes, many of them are sons and daughters of great chiefs.

Visitor—What are they doing now?

Teacher—This is the arithmetic hour, and they are doing sums.

Visitor—Ah! Yes, I have often heard of Indian summers.

The silence which followed was only broken by the wail of tomahawks.

"None but the Brave."

(Exchange.)

Lady Cice (who is rather tired and wants to sit down)—If you are really so devoted as you say you are, Sir Charles, I'll tell you how you can show your devotion.

Sir Charles (to the Grenadier guards)—Tell me, do you love me?

Lady Cice—Well, you can take that nice old lady down to supper, you know, and then I can have her chair!

An Old Picture.

The sweetest picture that memory brings, The dearest of all departed things, Is the old brown house, with its open door, Its wide flung windows and spotted floor.

I can see again the tany-bed, And the apples ripening overhead, The mullen stalks, with crowns of gold And the blossoming asters manifold.

I can hear again the patient tread Of the gentle mother, long since dead; I can feel her hand upon my brow, Ah! the earth has no such healing now.

For the race of women has passed away That blessed the land in its earlier days, And quaint old houses, low and brown, Are found unhealthy, and all torn down.

The world moves on, its progress brings Grand reforms, untrammeled of things; But nothing modern can fill the place Of the dear old home and mother's face.

—Mrs. C. Jewett.

The Test in Iowa.

If recent reports in regard to the state of Iowa are well founded, the people of that state who have at heart the temperance reform need to bestir themselves. The question whether the acknowledged evils of intemperance can be met by prohibitory enactments, or by restrictive legislation, or by the local option policy, or by moral influences exclusively, is a practical question, which is to-day subjected to a practical test before the whole world.

Stock Sick on Sandy Soil.

A. T. Case writes as follows, from Homestead, Mich.: "Some cattle in this region, on light sand, gradually lose appetite—during all seasons, but in winter generally—and this goes on for weeks and even months. One day they will eat a pint of corn meal, next-day will not touch it, but perhaps will eat oats, bran, or buckwheat meal, and so on, changing each feed till they will eat next to nothing, and finally starve to death; sometimes the process takes six months. We call it the 'dry up.' They are always constipated and the droppings hard balls, or like buttons. Occasionally scours set in a month or so before death. People here on clay farms are not troubled with the disease, and those completely successful with clover generally escape it. Some have tried coppers, some use antimony, but not always with success. When the animal has roots and will eat them there is little trouble. But when the trouble is seated they refuse roots, potatoes, bran, oats and corn meal, but will eat more corn on the ear than any other way. I now have a two-year-old heifer and a four-year-old cow in milk which have been ailing two months, yet in not bad condition. They need appetite. I have flaxseed ground into meal, but they will not eat. Have fed coppers, sulphur, salt and ashes, salt pork, potatoes, pumpkins, squash; shall try beas next week. Of course the first thing is prevention, but that is now too late. Can I help them or must they die? Horses and pigs do well, but sheep and cattle suffer alike on feed as above."

The Headstrong Hog.

"On one occasion I had repeatedly tried to drive an old hog to a neighbor's and it was necessary to cross two bridges to reach my destination. She drove peacefully to the first bridge, when she turned, with a grunt, passed me and my helpers, and soon reached home. Repeated efforts resulted similarly, and the hog was mistress of the situation. I sat down to rest and wipe away the perspiration, telling the boys to go home and I would drive her along after I got rested, or I would give up that a hog was more than a match for me. I rested and thought, and thought and rested, for two or three hours, rejecting several plans for outwitting her, when at last a basket came in my head. Said I to myself, 'I have got you now, you old brute!' and I made another effort. This time, when she turned at the bridge, she jammed her head into the basket. She commenced backing up; I followed her as fast as she backed, until I had backed her to and across the second bridge, when I withdrew the basket, and she found herself a stranger in a strange place. She tried it but once more that day, with the same result. Since then I have no trouble in driving hogs, or with cross hogs in butchering time, or in taking young pigs from their mothers. A good, strong, bushel basket in dexterous hands will battle the most savage hog, and I presume a wild boar would make, but few attempts to master a man if he was caught head first in a basket, for at that instant he begins to retreat backward, and would not be apt to charge many times."—[Farm and Fireside.
