Huden has lost that business of it.

A nice selection of stationery and fine cigars at New Variety Store.

A full line of new cloaks and dress goods at the XLNT Cash Store. Call and see.

There will be Episcopal services at Empire next Sunday at 11 a. m. and 7.30 p. m.

The Plaine dealer says Dr. Hunter is hunting for a location at Myrtle creek, Douglas county.

Just received at the XLNT Cash Store a full line of Ladies' Underwear and Jerseys, at very low prices.

The steamer Coos Bay sailed from San Francisco for this place, via Port Orford, last Monday, and is now due.

O. Reed's barn and outbuildings at his place on the Coquille were burned a few days ago, supposed to be incendiary.

Everybody comes and everybody goes away well pleased with fresh candy and peanuts from F. P. Norton's New Variety Store.

If you would have appetite, flesh, color, strength, and vigor, take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, that incomparable tonic and blood purifier.

The steamers Arcata and Arago were both bound at Empire yesterday—the former destined for the Umpqua and the latter for San Francisco.

The Ladies' Home Missionary society will meet at the Rod and Gun club rooms to-day (Thursday, October 22) at the usual hour. ANNE SHORT, secretary.

Judge G. M. Dyer has moved from his ranch at Centerville to Empire for the winter, and John Bear has moved from his place at Willamch slough to this place for the winter.

Homer Dray, proprietor of the Marshfield hotel, wishes, through the columns of our paper, to extend his most devoted thanks to the public generally, for the patronage his house is receiving.

Why go about with that aching head? Try Ayer's Pills. They relieve the stomach, restore the digestive organs to healthy action, remove the obstructions that depress nerves and brain, and thus cure headache.

The entertainment recently given in this place by the Ladies' Missionary society for the benefit of a better bell for the Baptist church netted about $60, which was very good, considering the low price of admission charged.

Our report of the circuit court proceedings in the case of Fred Eckhoff against Wm. Stephens was wrong in saying that the judgment was for plaintiff. It was against Eckhoff, who was yesterday compelled to leave his sick bed to settle the costs and other expenses of the action.

A. M. Crawford, Esq., has gone to Roseburg. A. M. was at Roseburg last long ago. Is it legal business takes him there? It is not. But the business is legal. A. M. has gone around lately wearing a vacant, far-off look. Evidently there will be trouble. Further particulars next week.

R. Cordes, engineer of the Bertha, saved one of Matt Matson's children from drowning a few days ago. The child fell overboard from the steamer on North Coos river; Cordes saw it fall; promptly reversed his engine; rushed to the guards; grabbed the child and pulled it aboard before any one else on the boat knew what was the matter.

Frank Smith has moved to the Judge Hall place, on the Isthmus. He has a four-years lease of the ranch from John Kruse, who bought it from Hall a year or two ago. Smith proposes to raise stock, make butter and cheese, and test the merits of and money in thoroughbred poultry adapted to this climate and market. Matt Smith and family have returned to California.

A handsome young merchant doing business on the Coquille river, in the vicinity of Myrtle Point, has lately given up possession of his heart to one of the belles of Sonoma county, Cal. When pretty blondes, with blue eyes and bewitching smiles, deign to look with favor upon us, there is none can withstand them—even a Wise man bows in submission at their feet. When will the harvest be?

This week J. W. Noah completed the purchase from John Norman of the timber on the old Davis place across the bay and Noah is now making arrangements to bring the timber to the bay by way of Timmerman's marsh, across which the timber will be carried through a ditch some 400 yards long and of sufficient depth and width to float the sawlogs. The first timber removed will be several hundred piles for the San Francisco market.

Another China racket occupied the attention of the justice, court all day on Monday. Three of the Mongolians were convicted of assault and battery and fined. Judge Hyde, in pronouncing sentence, took occasion to give the Chinese some very wholesome advice. He alluded to the prejudice against the race which obtains on this coast, and to the fact that in many places the people are driving the Chinese out of the community, and advised them that if they wanted to avoid like demonstrations here they had best be quiet and attend to their own business and avoid these disgraceful rows. People are tired of these difficulties and in the present state of feeling it will not require much to excite a hostility which may disregard law and do some serious damage.

A Big Fire for Marshfield.

Huden & Young's soda works at this place were totally destroyed by fire last Tuesday night. The works were located on the sidewalk, at the corner of Third and C streets, on Young's lot and near his residence.

The fire was first discovered about 11:30 o'clock, and at that time it had made such headway that no effort was made to save any part of the works, but extraordinary good work on the part of the volunteer firemen saved Young's residence, some 20 feet to the west, and a wood-shed and small stable, to the east, that stood within two or three feet of the soda works, to which the fire was strictly confined.

At the southwest corner of the works had been prepared a room for storing soda during winter weather. This room was double ceiled and the ceiling filled with sawdust and sawdust several inches deep was on the ceiling overhead. There had been a fire in this room Tuesday afternoon, and it is supposed that sparks from a defective stove-pipe fell into the sawdust, ignited it, and finally, after smoldering for some hours, it set the whole interior of the works afire before it broke through the roof and was discovered, when it was too late to save anything at all.

Huden & Young's loss, in addition to the injury to their business, will exceed $4000. They were insured up to a few weeks ago, when they allowed their policy to run out, and the loss is entirely their own.

The works will be immediately rebuilt, on a bigger and better basis than they were before the fire.

The volunteer firemen who did such noble work in preventing the spreading of the flames are entitled to great credit; but there were so many, and all entitled to the same credit, that we could not name them, and will not discriminate by naming any.

Marshfield Rhodes is the only one that we know of who was injured. His right eye was hurt by coming in contact with the hot flames and some of the falling timbers.

Everybody in town appeared to be at the fire, including the women and children. The women are entitled to special mention for the active part they took in subduing the flames. While many stalwart young men leaned against the fences and looked on, frail women carried big buckets of water and performed work that stout men might justly brag about.

It is now in order for the town authorities to make a move toward purchasing two or more small engines that can be effectively used by a few men. Had the wind been blowing Tuesday night, the fire would have been a very disastrous one.

The contempt in which our Jumbo engine is held was shown Tuesday night, by everybody letting it alone. They didn't want it at the fire, where it would have done much harm and no good.

The Ball Next Saturday Night.

In consequence of the combination ball to be given at Norman's hall in this place next Saturday night, by the brass bands of Empire and Marshfield, the steamer Comet will leave Empire for this place at 7 o'clock Saturday evening, and return after the dance.

The grand march will begin at 9 o'clock sharp. The floor managers will consist of members of both bands and the music will be by brass and string instruments. Arrangements have been made with John Snyder, of the Western hotel, for a grand midnight banquet, at 50 cents per plate. All are invited and a good time is guaranteed.

The center of attraction of evenings for some time has been the burning stumps in front of the Coos Bay News office. It is proverbial that boys enjoy poking and playing about a fire, and it is apparent that the "old boys" of Marshfield have not put away childish things, for large numbers have kept nightly vigils about the fire. The editor of the News at one time thought the blaze might be utilized in celebrating the news from Ohio, and was energetic in keeping up the flame; but when the dispatches were received, he put off to warm his brogans by the family hearthstone. On Saturday night the stumps were bored full of holes and a fine blaze was started. After the small boys had gone to bed the "old blocks" congregated about the cheerful glare and some one proposed a feast of chicken, roasted on the glowing embers. Buckley said there was a chicken coop next the China store, but declined to assist in any larceny; whereupon a detachment set out, found Buckley's coop instead of the Chinaman's, and secured a chicken, which was quickly undressed and speedily cooked. It was a sublime sight to see those playful old cats sitting on their haunches about that stump, gnawing bones, their coat-tails trailing in the dust, and themselves recounting the exploits of early life in sundry raids on melon patches and chicken coops of other years. They so far revived their youth that they adopted the old saw, "Stolen fruit is sweetest." Next morning the wreck of chickens was painfully manifest. A trail of feathers was found leading directly to the door of the News office, and it is believed that the old political rooster that at long intervals struts at the head of a column in that paper, and was taken out and fed and aired for the Ohio election, was picked and cooked in that wild barbecue. O, most foetid and unnatural murder.

The North Bend mill has been shut down since the accident to the machinery a few days ago, and parts of the engine have been sent to San Francisco for repairs, and the mill will not run until the return of these parts of the engine, which, of course, will be as soon as possible.

CORRESPONDENCE.

More About Our School.

To the Editor of the COAST MAIL.

In two late issues of your paper were articles calling attention to the necessity of building up in our town a thoroughly reliable academy, fully equipped to do good work, morally and physically, as well as mentally. This is a matter of importance to all alike—one of such paramount importance that, too much cannot be said upon it.

For too long a time, now Marshfield has suffered the want of an institution that will afford her rising youth a thorough training, not only in the common school branches, but in such of the advanced studies as every well-informed person, sooner or later, feels the necessity of a knowledge of. Nor is it sufficient that such a school should be maintained for only three to six months in the year at public expense. To meet the present requirements, there should be an unbroken session of at least nine months a year.

It is unnecessary, here, to enter into a labored argument, to convince any one not only that such a school is demanded, but that, financially, it would be a paying investment for our property-holders, merchants, and others interested in the growth of the town. The fact that that our people are spending nearly $3000 a year in other communities for educational purposes is, in itself, an unanswerable argument for a home school that will afford equal facilities to those seeking an education elsewhere. This sum, alone, if no other element were considered, would, if applied to our school, in a few years build up an institution of which we might justly feel proud. But this is not all. While no one will dispute that it is far better to keep children home, where they can be under the watchful care of parental supervision, another advantage of equal importance is the fact that nowhere else in the state are the conditions so favorable for hard study and healthful development, as here in Marshfield. Our climate, free from the enervating heat of summer and the biting cold of winter, so prevalent in other less favored localities, offers natural advantages for school work that are rarely equaled. These advantages, if supplemented by those in the power of the people to confer, would soon give to a school here, conducted on broad and liberal principles, such renown, at home and in the immediate vicinity, that it could not fail to draw largely from the surrounding country. The vacant houses now so painfully numerous would fill up with tenants eager to secure the advantages of the school, and besides keeping our own money at home, we would draw more here, to increase the volume of our trade.

It can easily be demonstrated that every pupil brought to the town is worth, at the lowest estimate, $250 a year to the town. Twenty pupils would thus spend $5000 a year in our midst. The money thus kept here and drawn here would more than repay the people for the expenditure necessary to fit up and maintain the school. Not only this. Take the thrifty immigrants, or those dissatisfied with the rigorous climate of the east, who contemplate moving to and investing in our midst, and their first question is: "What are the facilities for education in your place?" Nine times out of ten, an unfavorable answer will decide them to look elsewhere for a place to make their home and invest their wealth. In whatever light the subject may be viewed, no safer or surer way can be found to insure a permanent and prosperous growth of the community than good schools.

With our present building, 1000 invested in desks, seats, globes, charts, and a few necessary pieces of chemical and philosophical apparatus would equip the school with everything necessary to meet the present demands. But aside from this, there are other considerations to be taken into account in building up a good school. The most competent and zealous teachers, and the most elaborate fittings that are to be had, will not alone make a perfect school. The people must, individually and collectively, put their shoulders to the wheel, and by their interest and influence help the good work along. There is work to be done out of the school room as well as in it—the efforts of the teachers in the class rooms must be supplemented by equal efforts on the part of parents at home. Petty jealousies and small rivalries must be put aside, and a hearty support must be given the school in all its efforts for good. This is an element in the work of our school that can be applied now, in its poorly fitted condition, as well as at any other time, and one that parents should not wait long to use.

The work of the school room is not alone to impart so much knowledge of arithmetic, or grammar, or algebra, but in developing the highest possible mental strength, just as hard work develops physical strength—a mental strength that will enable the student to go on acquiring knowledge after school days are ended, and that will arm him with a discriminating judgment, a retentive memory, and habits of exactness, system, and order and thoroughness in everything that will be found useful in any walk of life. This mental strength cannot be acquired except by hard and unremitting mental exercise. Conning over daily in the school room a few easily learned lessons, and reciting a few rapidly acquired but more easily forgotten ideas does not sufficiently exercise the brain to develop the mental strength necessary. In the school room there is time only to impart a correct idea of the principles under consideration, and to fix these ideas and make them strong and complete, they must be studied over and repeated at home till mastered.

That which benefits the student is what he does for himself—not what he sees others do. That which he uses in after life is what he remembers, not what he forgets, and to remember, he must study, and not be afraid of studying too much.

The few hours of the school room do not give time for this work, and if parents would secure a full measure of success to their children, they will see that sufficient time is given to studying at home. There are parents here, as in all communities, who think this home work unnecessary. They antagonize every effort of the teacher to reach the highest results, by teaching their children that these demands are unnecessary and unreasonable. They forget that any undertaking, however small, demands work to insure success. Proficiency in music cannot be acquired except by hours and days and years of practice, outside of the instruction hours, and it is the same with brain development. In nearly every instance these parents will find, if they question their children, that they themselves will admit that they cannot master their studies without this outside work. More than this, the parents themselves will be forced to admit, when too late, that their children have not done as well as they might have done, and as well as others have done who have been more faithful, and whose parents have recognized and performed their part of the work.

Teachers should be credited with experience in the best methods of achieving success, and their efforts should meet a hearty approval. Those who do not give this encouragement have no cause to complain of the school, if their children are not as thorough or their progress as rapid as they might wish. Support the teachers' method, insist upon a strict compliance with all reasonable demands; then if there is no success, and not till then, attach the blame where it belongs—to the teacher.

ICHABOD CREESE

From South Coos River.

To the Editor of the COAST MAIL: Farmers are about through gathering their crops this year and are now busy getting up wood for winter.

Frank Farrin, who had his arm broke last week, is improving.

Green Farrin, of the Ferndale ranch, has 25 tons of snowflake potatoes for sale at $15 per ton, delivered in Marshfield. Anyone wishing potatoes would do well to call on Farrin, as Green never keeps any but the best.

Isaac Landrith met with a severe accident last week, while he was rolling a stump from a road. He had raised the stump up with a jackscrew, when the stump fell and caught his hand while it was on the jackscrew, making a painful wound in the fleshy part of the hand.

The ball at Matson's hall Saturday night was a grand success. The steamer Bertha went up the south fork and brought the people around and took them home in the morning. The only trouble was that the hall was too small for the crowd. The supper was given by Wm. Vincamp and was first-class in every respect. The fourth-of-July floor manager was there, but Capt. darts had been twisted around him so firmly that he was useless as a manager.

Geo. Farrin, who is attending school at the Marshfield academy, was up home last week, looking as well and hearty as ever.

The writing school has an attendance of 45 pupils, and is prospering rapidly under the instructions of Prof. R. W. Cheney.

Thomas Plaine has put a ditch through his place, from the hill to the river, to drain his swamp, and Green Farrin has put a ditch along the foothill, to catch the seepage from the hill.
