Lawyers in Politics.

There are many of the world be reformers who think the first thing to do, in order to purify the political world, is to get rid of lawyers. So far do some people carry this idea that they are in favor of political organizations which shall exclude this class, which ignorant people are fond of calling corrupt and unpatriotic. The fact is, that there is no class of citizens to which the republic is more indebted for its founding and perpetuity than to the lawyers of the country. The elements which made the Declaration of Independence a fact were composed chiefly of lawyers. There were fifty-six persons affixed their names to that immortal document and of that number twenty-five were lawyers. There were one minister of the gospel, five physicians, twelve mariners and nine grangers. Thus while they were greatly superior in numbers the lawyers did most of the work. The person in the continental congress who first moved to declare the thirteen colonies free and independent was a lawyer named Richard Lee and when the resolution was adopted and a committee was appointed to draft a Declaration, the man selected as most fitted for this work was, Thos. Jefferson, John Adams, Benj. Franklin, Roger Sherman and Robert Livingston. Jefferson was chairman and did most of the work of drawing the instrument, and the most brilliant advocate of the document was John Adams. All these men were lawyers except Benj. Franklin and he was a printer. Nor was the influence and work of the legal profession any less in the construction of the constitution. The idea that the framework of this government was laid by grangers, by men from the shop and plow, is a great error. The only plans of consolidation and organization which were presented were the work of legal minds, and those were laid before the convention of 1787, and referred to a committee of detail for the purpose of reporting a constitution—which committee consisted of James Wilson, John Rutledge, Edward Randolph, Oliver Ellsworth and Nat Gorham, and all these were lawyers except Gorham. The committee to which the report was finally committed to arrange and revise the articles was composed entirely of lawyers. In fact the Constitutional Convention was substantially an assembly of lawyers. They numbered 34 out of the fifty-five members, and beside Washington, who was the presiding officer, there was only one who took any prominent part, who was not a lawyer, and that was Franklin. And the same conspicuous service rendered in founding the government was continued in his administration. The first secretary of the treasury was Alexander Hamilton, a lawyer of great financial ability, who shaped the early policy of the government as no other man. John Marshall, the first noted chief justice of the supreme court, was called "the second maker of the Constitution," and Justice Story says "that when he first took his seat on the bench, scarcely more than two or three questions of constitutional law had ever engaged the attention of the Supreme Court." Fifty-one decisions upon constitutional law were pronounced by the court, while he was chief justice, and only once was he in the minority. Of the nine men called by Washington into his cabinet in the eight years of his administration, six were lawyers; of the eight members of the cabinet of John Adams, five were lawyers. Six out of ten men in Jefferson's cabinet, and eight out of the fourteen in those of Madison were of the legal profession. And after Washington every president was a lawyer until the election of Harrison in 1841, and of the twenty-two vice presidents of the United States all but four were lawyers. Of the Secretaries of State out of the twenty-five, all but one, Edward Everett, have been trained at the bar. All four of the Secretaries of the Treasury but one, and out of the thirty-five post-master-generals all but eight have had legal training. Passing into the military service it would be supposed that the military ranks would furnish the heads of the departments of war and the navy, but out of thirty-six Secretaries of War twenty seven have been lawyers, and out of thirty-three Secretaries of the Navy all but eight were educated to the legal profession.

The first congress assembled in 1789 and in the senate were seventeen out of twenty-nine of this class, and in the House about half of the members, and in 1837-9 more than four fifths of the Senators had studied law, and in the House more than two-thirds were lawyers. The idea of keeping lawyers out of politics is the scheme of ignorant and narrow minds, and a man has read the history of this country to poor purpose if he has not discovered the transcendent services of the profession to the politics of the republic.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 7.—The Southern Pacific Company has contracted for and will have brought as rapidly as possible to San Pedro, 70,000,000 feet of lumber. This is rendered necessary by the unusual demand this season. The extensive damage done by floods has practically exhausted the stock usually kept on hand. This amount of lumber will require 225 to 250 vessels to deliver, or an average of forty vessels a month for six months, to be discharged at the wharves of San Pedro. This, with the coal ships and lumber schooners of the various lumber companies discharging there, will revive the flush times of two years ago.

The Flood in Curry.

(From Gold Beach Gazette.)
Hume's cannery was badly damaged many of the piles being torn out. It was for two days a case of touch and go; but as none of the big drift logs touched it fairly, it did not go. The water was about six inches deep on the floor, running with great velocity, bursting up the floor in many places until it was considered dangerous to go in it. The water was even with the store floor, but lacked a few inches of the hotel. The store building, however, instead of being damaged, was bene fitted by filling around the piling to the extent of six or eight feet. The Gazette office, more than a hundred yards from the bank of the river, was serenaded by a sassy, babbling current that banged the floating rubbish against its sides with ceaseless clamor. But satisfied with carrying off our woodpile, and with making a prisoner of our postmaster it respected our sanctum, and retired by making us a present of a large addition to our real estate, in the shape of a fine assortment of valuable mud, giving us an excellent excuse for issuing a half sheet.

From parties coming to town we have been able to obtain the following news:
Hunters Creek bridge withstood the flood, and is all right, to the great astonishment of those knowing ones, who, on its completion, were so quick to predict that it would be carried away by the first small rise.
Pistol River bridge, probably the most costly one in the county, started on its rapid march from Ass Crook's to the sea, before the river had reached within four feet of its maximum height. Hume's net-rack wharf, coal-kill, and the Indian creek bridge departed early in the fray.
Six houses were seen to pass down the river.
G. W. Ciarno lost his barn and all his grain and hay.
The Jerry's Flat school lot, which was about 100 yards from the bank of the river, disappeared with the house.
S. D. Merriman's fine little forty acre farm, one of the best in the country, is now only a miserable, ugly looking gravel bar. It is all gone.
J. F. Wakeman, who has well earned the reputations of being the best farmer and gardener on Rogue river, and who has gained the entire confidence of this community by never deceiving with a false promise, is left without a farm, garden, or a roof of any kind.
It is believed that George Miller's ranch on Fleming's slough is entirely ruined.
Thos. Smith's ranch luckily escaped with slight damage.
Wm. Huntley's bottom land has almost entirely disappeared, though there are hopes that his sawmill has escaped damage.
Plummer Emery and wife were both sick in bed when the flood came, but were able to escape from their house, which, though badly damaged, did not float off. It is believed his beautiful little farm is ruined.
S. B. Gardner suffered a loss of 60 tons of hay, about 1000 bushels of oats, and two fine yearling colts.
It is reported that the wreck of the O. & C. railroad bridge was seen shooting along on its journey to the sea.
Although the river is yet high, the indications are that the island in front of "the second maker of the Constitution," and Justice Story says "that when he first took his seat on the bench, scarcely more than two or three questions of constitutional law had ever engaged the attention of the Supreme Court." Fifty-one decisions upon constitutional law were pronounced by the court, while he was chief justice, and only once was he in the minority. Of the nine men called by Washington into his cabinet in the eight years of his administration, six were lawyers; of the eight members of the cabinet of John Adams, five were lawyers. Tea as a Beverage.

Use a china or porcelain pot. If you do use metal, let it be tin, new, bright and clean; never use it when the tin is worn out and the iron exposed. If you do, you are playing chemist and forming a tannate or tea-ate of iron.
Use black tea. Green tea, when good is kept at home. What goes abroad is bad, very bad and horrible. Besides containing the 203 adulterations the Chinese philanthropist puts up for the outside barbarian, it is always prevailed by copper dust from the dirty curing pans of the growers. Infuse your tea. Don't boil it! Place one teaspoonful of tea in the pot and pour over it 1 1/2 cups of boiling water, that is, water really boiling. If your tea is poor, use more. It is cheaper, though, to buy good tea at the outset. Put your pot on the back part of the stove, carefully covering, so that it shall not lose its heat, and the tea its bouquet. Let it remain there five minutes, then drink it.
Drink your tea plain. Don't add milk or sugar. Tea-brokers and tea-tasters never do; epicures never do; the Chinese never do. Milk contains fibrin, albumen, or some other stuff, and the tea a delicate amount of tannin. Mixing the two makes the liquid turbid. This turbidity, if I remember the cyclopaedia aright, is tannate of fibrin, or leather. People who put milk in tea are therefore drinking boots and shoes in mild disguise.—Wong Chin Foo, in the Cook.

Language is hardly strong enough to express my admiration of the merits of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is the best remedy for croup and whooping cough I have ever used. During the past eighteen years I have tried nearly all the prominent cough medicines on the market but say, and with pleasure too, that Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is the best of all. Thomas Rhodes, Bakersfield, California. For sale by H. Sengstacken, Marshfield and Empire City.

Last winter Mr. H. E. Kinkade, collector for the United States Express Company, at Des Moines, Iowa, was severely troubled with chilblains. The swelling and intense itching of his feet was a great annoyance to him. He tried several remedies without benefit, but fortunately bought a bottle of Chamberlain's Pain Balm. He says he only applied it three times until his feet were entirely well and free from itching and swelling. For sale by H. Sengstacken, Marshfield and Empire City.

I never get a cold but I use Dr. Murphy's Syrup of Tar and Wild Cherry, which relieves me at once. 50c. a bottle. Try it.
