An Argentine Lesson.

The lesson of the revolution in the Argentine Republic is thus pointed out by the New York Tribune:

"The president is not a native of Buenos Ayres, the most powerful state in the confederation, and on that account he has always met with resistance from political rivals in the capital; but he is an able sagacious executive, of great force of character and of marked self-possession in grave crisis.

On his arrival in town to-day he received a letter signed by G. W. Martin, dated Portland, July 29, saying that he had better keep still about this matter and not let people know what an old fool and sucker he was.

Mr. Jones has wired different parts of the country and offers $500 reward for his apprehension. Jones takes it rather good naturedly, under the circumstances.

The Plate countries were exposed for two generations after the revolt against Spain to the evils of military dictatorships and civil war.

A sawmill machinery drummer recently told the writer that the biggest sawmill in the world is on Puget Sound.

"Charles Hanson, of the big Tacoma mill has traveled extensively and tells some interesting things to Wealth of the West about what he saw abroad.

The biggest sawmill on earth he says is in Christiania, Norway, and owned by one man. It has a capacity of 1,000,000 feet in a day (eighteen hours).

The lumber is manufactured much smoother than in this country, as the saws are not crowded as much as here.

The Normal Institute.

The supervisors of the educational interests of Multnomah county are arranging for a "normal institute" to be held in this city in August.

The objects of this institute, briefly stated, are to improve the public schools by directing the teachers of the same in studies taught and in the methods of imparting knowledge in order that subjects may be presented to pupils in the most effective, and, at the same time, the most practical manner.

There is within the United States an army of over 400,000 teachers, with a grand aggregate of 16,000,000 children under their direct supervision.

Hints on Pruning.

If the art is understood, it is possible to have a tree of almost any desired form and always of handsome shape.

Fall pruning makes the strongest trees and vines, while spring pruning gives the most fruitless, hence, for a weak tree or vine, prune in the fall, while for a strong poorly bearing tree prune in the spring.

The right time is in the growing season, as then the wounds will heal most readily.

As a general rule in pruning, study symmetry. Do not cut away any more healthy limbs than is necessary, but dis-entangle them and cut away the smaller sprouts, so as to admit all the light and air possible.

Clear away all suckers, scrape the rough, dead bark from the trunk, but do it gently, remembering that the new bark under it is green and tender.

If you want your trees and vines to grow well, you must treat them well, and they will repay you a hundred fold for all the care you bestow upon them.

Editor Eugene Guard: James Barger has an apple tree in his orchard, in Willamette precinct, that measures sixty-six inches in circumference three feet above the ground.
