It will be a critical moment when he hears the word Bryan whoops.

A party compelled to pass election laws to sustain itself is in the last stages of a fatal disease.

The mid-road party, who are to hold a national conference, might make a stop by nominating Bryan for 1901.

Now that even H. K. Smith has given him a few kicks it looks as though Mr. Bryan was down for keeps.

The Sultan of Turkey will find himself discussing a lively topic to a tune whistled by Uncle Sam before he is much older.

President McKinley's plea at Philadelphia for the sacredness of the ballot will be approved by every honest man.

Unstable men will wait until the bill for the reduction of internal revenue taxes is completed before attempting to criticize it.

The republican caucus of the Nebraska legislature should be able to settle the Senatorial question without any outside assistance.

Chicago's manufacturing growth may be judged from the fact that it is now containing 20 per cent more than it did one year ago.

Have Hill hasn't been doing any talking for publication since the election; he has been too busy checking and shaking hands with himself.

Now that the Canal Commission has reported in favor of the Nicaragua route for the Isthmian canal let Congress do its part toward starting this great work.

It is said that many of the Filipino rebels are armed with guns of American make, and if Uncle Sam can find out who furnished them there will be trouble for somebody.

Although Senator Spooner has announced that he would not be a candidate for re-election, there is a strong movement in Wisconsin to give him another term.

Our Paul might obtain a few pointers on the practical value of counts from crowds drawn together by curiosity by addressing Hon. W. J. Bryan, Lincoln, Nebraska.

There seems to be no good reason for keeping Oklahoma, with a population of nearly 40,000, out of statehood any longer; and New Mexico and Arizona are also ripe for statehood.

Gen. Jos. Wheeler will in a speech the other day: "I believe that under good government the Filipinos will become a race of which we may be proud. I think they are vastly superior to the Mexicans."

Speaker Henderson, in describing the campaign gave the republicans in Congress a motto that should be fixed up to distinguish this session of Congress: "We republicans are people who work, not talk."

Senator Pettigrew has been keeping quiet, but Mr. Ross, who was with him, has had up to say that the Boers will win yet. But he wasn't sure enough of it to stay over there to participate in their triumph.

Chairman Jones has reiterated the use of his tongue sufficiently to announce that the country's prosperity was what re-elected President McKinley. He ought not to have improved on the said election that he couldn't see the prosperity.

Congress would do well to follow the recommendation of Fourth Assistant Postmaster General Brewster additional legislation against "junk goods" and lottery swindlers, which will close the express and telegraph companies to the swindlers.

GOLDEN HOUR OR DEATH.
There is but one small chance to save your life and that is through an operation, was the awful prospect before Mrs. H. B. Hunt, of Lima, N. D., by her doctor after vainly trying to cure her of a frightful case of stomach trouble and yellow jaundice. He didn't count on the marvelous power of Electric Bitters to cure Edward and Liver troubles, but she heard of it, took seven bottles, was wholly cured, avoided surgeon's knife, now weighs more and feels better than ever. It's positively guaranteed to cure Stomach, Liver and Kidney troubles and never disappoints. Price 50c at W. A. Golden's drug store.

THE NEW CONGRESS.

The exact partisan complexion of the Senate of the Congress which comes into existence on March 4 1901 has not been determined, but there is a reasonable probability that the Republican majority will be fully twenty. This is a longer lead than the one which the Republicans have in the present Senate, although the majority in this body is greater than any party has had since the reconstruction days. The Republican majority in the House of Representatives which will enter next March will be forty-seven. In the present House the Republicans had a lead of thirteen at the beginning of the session in 1899, though it has been strengthened slightly since then by the unseating of two or three Democrats whose title was not good. In the Congress which was elected in 1900 when Mr. McKinley was chosen the first time the Republicans had a lead of only eleven in the Senate, but they had a majority of about fifty in the House.

Thus the Republicans will start out at the beginning of President McKinley's second term with a better working majority than they had when he began his first term. Their lead will be longer in the Senate, and though it lack two or three votes of being as great in the House as it was four years ago it will, in reality, be larger, because the silver ex-republicans are all drifting back to the Republican party, and many of the Democrats will go with the Republicans on all issues of importance. No election since that of Monroe in 1820, in the era of good feeling, when there was nominally only one party in existence, has left less of a sting to the beaten party than the one just held has done. Many of the men who supported Bryan are glad that he was beaten, and a considerable number of those who supported him with sincerity are accepting the situation, as revealed by the tremendous pro-Bryan vote on the Republican side, and are ready to strike hands with the Republicans on all subjects of prime importance which will come before the country in the next few years. Thus Mr. McKinley will have greater support in the measure which he may recommend in the Congress which is soon to come into legal existence than he had in the one which entered power with him in 1897.

Never did a party start out in a presidential term with brighter prospects than those which present themselves to the republicans at this time. Mr. McKinley has received a larger majority of electoral votes than any President has obtained since Grant in 1872, when all the Southern states were not represented in the electoral college. He has a larger popular plurality than any President before his time has ever gained. The majority which will be on his side in the Senate will be greater than any President has had since Grant, while the minority will be much less hostile to him than it was to Grant or to any other Republican President whom the country has had. In the House, too, the minority will be mutually complaisant. It was known long before the election that there were thousands of Democrats in the South and West who were supporting Bryan because they were confident that he would be beaten, and they were not yet prepared to cut themselves loose from their party. These Democrats are as happy over the result of the election as are the Republicans or the honest money Democrats who voted the Republican ticket. In fact, the present time is really an era of good feeling in a much truer sense than was the eight or ten years of the first quarter of the century which received that name.

With a city debt greater than the combined debts of every State in the Union it is not surprising that the six payers of Greater New York are seriously studying ways and means of overthrowing Tammany and getting their municipal affairs on an honest basis.

For a man who is without a country at the present time, Uncle Paul Kruger is creating considerable of a stir in Europe. England, however, is not getting so excited over his appearance in Continental Europe as France is excited and desired. There is talk, indeed, of inviting him to England. Meanwhile the war in the Transvaal hangs on, and is giving England some uneasiness. In fact, the British Government has not had so costly and troublesome a fight on its hands since the Crimean conflict against Russia almost half a century ago as in the one which is still technically at least, under way in South Africa.

They Pay the Rent.

"There is," says a traveler, "a steamer raying which have at Queens-town, Ireland. It is the steamer which pick up the mails, which can leave London 12 hours later than the boats do Liverpool and overtake them there. Frequently, however, delays occur, and then the passengers kill time by going ashore, and the native is always in things, makes boys ask pugny, enous, etc., which are spitefully malicious and characteristic of Ireland."

"Some of the shillabys are wretched and awful to look upon and have no possible place in our life, their only object being to take in the unwary transatlantic traveler. One I saw there had a head fully six inches in diameter, with projecting knobs and roots thickly covering it. It was so heavy that to lift it was an effort and to carry it any distance without using a dandy a physical impossibility. It was a infuriated looking weapon, and a blow from it on the head would have done for any living thing, even a dandy from Georgia."

"Why," I asked in my surprise, "what on earth do you use this for?" "That," he rejoined, "Arrah, that's what we pay the rent with."

Adhesive and Pressed Stamps.
"Wait until I have washed off the postage stamp on this envelope, spoiled in the addressing," said a man. "It is not necessary to do that, as is commonly supposed," said a lawyer. "You may take your scissors and cut out the adhesive (not the impressed) stamp and stick it fast to your new envelope with mucilage notwithstanding the adhering piece of the old envelope."

A Rapid Observer.
Here is a story with a moral: A countryman had just returned from a journey to Paris. One of his cronies asked him what opinion he had formed of the Parisians. "Delightful people," he replied, "but I should certainly and altogether incapable of forming an attachment of any duration."

Fear Evil Spirits.
Evil spirits are held in great dread by the Chinese, who believe them to bear special ill will to the eldest son of the family and to delight in playing tricks upon him. To prevent this the eldest son in one family was named "Sixth Little Sister," the child's parents evidently being under the impression that evil spirits could be deceived as to the sex of the child.

A Question of Advantage.
Man is distinguished from the beast by the power to speak his thoughts; the best from the man by the power to keep his thoughts to himself.—Detroit Journal.

Consumption
is destruction of lung by a growing germ, precisely as moldy cheese is destruction of cheese by a growing germ.

If you kill the germ, you stop the consumption. You can or can't, according to when you begin.

Take Scott's Emulsion of Cod Liver Oil; take a little at first.

It acts as a food; it is the easiest food. Seems not to be food; makes you hungry; eating is comfortable. You grow stronger. Take more; not too much; enough is as much as you like and agrees with you. Satisfy hunger with usual food; whatever you like and agrees with you. When you are strong again, have recovered your strength—the germs are dead; you have killed them. If you have not tried it, send for free sample, its agreeable taste will surprise you.

SOME FAMOUS FLAGS.

HISTORIC SHREDS THAT TELL AN INTERESTING STORY.
These Bits of History Are Elongated Reminders of Our Early Naval Victories From the Time of the Revolution Down to 1814.

There is an interesting historical collection in the library of congress. It consists of remnants of flags which were flown from the vessels that are famous in the history of the country. This collection was found among the possessions, which included all sorts of literary oddities and a valuable collection of autographs, left by the late Peter Force, a native of New Jersey, whose father was a veteran of the Revolution. Force had many military and civil offices in Washington. He died there in 1858.

The bits of flag have been carefully preserved in a large album between brown paper leaves, each leaf bearing the name and something of the history of the vessel from which it came. The most striking part of the exhibit is that which relates to Perry's capture of Lake Erie on September 19, 1813. There is a piece of the flag which was flown from Perry's flagship in the contest made memorable by his warning, "Don't give up the ship." There are also pieces of the flags of the ships of the enemy captured on the occasion—the Queen Charlotte, Little Belt, Lady Prevost, Mantox and Chippewa.

Another interesting remnant is that of the flag of the Alliance, the ship which was of the fleet John Paul Jones formed in France, with the Baroness (Lafayette) on board, the purpose of which was the attack of British ships during the Revolution. It was the Alliance which took an indignant part in the discredit of her eccentric commander, a Frenchman named Boscawen, in the fight with the Serapis. The bit of flag is of that carried during the fight.

Another interesting flag represented is that of the USS Constitution, which was captured by the British in 1812. This flag was captured by the USS Constitution, which was captured by the British in 1812. This flag was captured by the USS Constitution, which was captured by the British in 1812.

The Constitution in December, 1812, British having captured Hull, captured the USS Constitution, and the flag of the latter ship contributes a strip to the Force collection. There is a piece of the flag of the USS Constitution, which was captured by the British in 1812.

Madison's victories on Lake Champlain, achieved in 1814, are represented by the remains of the flags of the Constitution, Linnet and Chubb. The bit of the naval flag in the exhibit is that of the USS Constitution, which was captured by the British in 1812.

Many of the actions which these flags represent established the fame of our naval officers. Congress in many instances bestowed medals for the gallantry shown during the capture of the USS Constitution, which was captured by the British in 1812.

Advice to Literary Aspirants.
In submitting manuscript for publication in a magazine, the placing of the author's full name and address at the head of the first sheet and the inclosing of return postage are universally accepted by editors as sufficiently indicating the fact that the article is to be paid for if published, or to be returned to the author if it is not acceptable. Letters are usually sent with manuscripts, but are really superfluous unless some special explanation is necessary. A price should not be put upon a manuscript unless the author has positively decided not to accept any smaller amount.—Ladies' Home Journal.

The End at Last.
"The last chapter of my book surprised you, didn't it?" said the young author. "Happier ending than you expected, eh?" "Well," replied the long suffering friend, "I certainly felt a sense of relief when I read it."—Philadelphia Press.

This government's hint seems to have had a good effect upon the foreign ministers at Peking, who are now really trying to agree instead of to disagree. It is their last chance. If they fail, the work will be put in more capable hands.

Comptroller of the Currency Dawes strongly recommends in his annual report that the laws be amended so as to place more restrictions upon the loaning of money by national banks to their own directors. He says that two-thirds of the failures of national banks can be traced to the practice of loaning money to directors and officers without proper security.

President McKinley may well be proud of his Union League Club speech. It contains much that any American might well be proud of, and the following especially appeals to republicans: "The republican party has placed upon it tremendous responsibilities. No party could ask for a higher expression of confidence; it is a great thing to have this confidence; it will be a greater thing to deserve and hold it. Who wouldn't be proud to have it?"
