FOR STRIPING PAINT.

Rimple Device For Decorating file ther Plat or Rounded Surfaces. A simple device by means of which painters can readily stripe flat or rounded surfaces, described by The Releatific American, is the invention of Mr. George II. Allon of North Creek,

The striper consists of a paint reservoir closed at one end by a serow cap provided with a year bale controlled by an adjustable gate. At the other end of the reservoir a nonzie is located. Embracing the reservoir are two clips, the upper of which is made of spring metal and receives between its ends a guide arm bent near its lower end. The second clip serves the purpose of bolding a flat spring up on which a rocking arm is mounted, carrying at its lower end a scaling cup. The flat spring normally presses the scaling cuptightly against the negale to prevent the escape of paint from the reservoir. In order to stripe a surface with one or more straight lines the guide arm carried by the upper clip is adjusted so that its bent end engages the edge of the surface. As the device is drawn along the nextle is opened by pressing the end of the rocking arm carried by the lower clip so as to bring the senting eup upward. The merits of the device are obvious.

Some Novel Inventions.

By the use of a recently patented inhaler sufferers from catarrb, hay fever and similar discuses may treat themselves at night, the time when affections of the throat and head make the most formidable strides. The device consists of two absorbent pads connected by a wire spring, the latter being bent to a shape convenient for attachment to the central cartliage of the

With the idea of eliminating to some extent at least the disagreeable affliction of sensickness two Englishmen bave devised a self leveling chair. The chair is suspended from two rings working in a framework at right angles to each other, and it is claimed the chair will remain level in the roughest sea, The idea is also supplied to berths,

Umbrellas or canes may be provided with a spring book fixed just under the head by which they may be hung on a rack or hooked into the pocket when it is desired to use both hands for some other purpose. The book is concealed when not in use, forming a smooth

An ordinary electric alarm is connected with contact points underneath the bed, the weight of the sleeper fereing them together and forming a circuit. When the alarm is released, the bell continues ringing till the weight is removed and the ciroult broken.

Comfort in cold weather is insured by a combined carriage lamp and foot warmer. The lamp is placed below the body of the vehicle and is connected by a tube directly over the blaze with a warming chamber inside the body of the wagen on which the feet may be

Mustard as usually served in cups or open pots soon dries up. A German has invented an airtight cup having a piston projecting through the top. On pressing the piston a plunger forces the mustard through a spout in the inside of the cup.-Chiengo Evening Post.

The Address He Got. A Russian gentleman tells a funny story of his first encounter with the English language.

The day after his arrival in London he made a call on a friend in Park lane, and on leaving the premises inscribed in his notebook what he supposed to be the correct address.

The next day, desiring to go to the same place again, he called a cabman and pointed to the address that he had written down. The cabman looked him over, laughed, cracked the whip, and drove away without him.

This experience being repeated with two or three other cabmen, the Russtan turned indignantly to the police, with no better results. One officer would laugh, another would tap his head and make a motion imitating the revolution of a wheel. Finally the poor foreigner gave it up, and, with a great deal of difficulty, recalling the landmarks which he had observed the day before, found his way to his friend's house. Once there, and in company with one who could understand him, he delivered himself of a hot condemnation of the cabmen and the police of London for their impertinence and discourtesy. His friend asked for a look at the mirth provoking address, and the mystery was solved. This was the Cheintine Mantiness.

Christian mantiness is something derived, and it is to be acquired in prerisely the same way in which you gain still in your occupation-namely, by the use of proper tools and instruments. You value your implements ! for the work which they can do, and if they are useful to the end you prize them and will not part with them. Jeen manhood so that it became henceforth glorious to be a man. He alone is the true standard. You have his example, and you have what is more important, the promise of his continual belp. With these go forth and "show yourselves tren." Of him we learn to be gentlemer -that is, men with all the tongnificence of earnestness and courage enjoined with tenderness and refinement. Cf him we learn to be cour trous to all, obedient to lawful authority, respectful to superiors, kind to inferiors.-Rev. Dr. Dan F. Bradley, Cougregationalist, Grand Bapids,

Self Interest.

Self interest rules, and because it is the prime thing some people adopt the silly merit of despising business, as if its self interest were wrong and as if there were nothing else. Self interest is not wrong, and when it contains intelligence and pursues ends which no selfishness can monopolize it is of greafer public good than any imaginable absence of it would be. It arises from the ineradicable instinct implanted in our creation-the instinct of self preservation-and if it were not for its depth and power all public good would fall to pieces.-Rev. John W. Day, Episcopallan, St. Louis.
