MASSIFICADE ORESTE

OUR EX-PRESIDENTS.

The death of Coneral Harrison leaves Mr. Cleveland us the only livipg ex-president, and there cannot be a second until 1905 at the carifest. When Mr. Cleveland became president in 1885, there were three ex-presidents living-Grant, Hayes Arthur, Two of them dist within 20 months, President Player lived until 1903 and was for a great part of the time after Mr. Arthur's death the only living ex-president.

At the outbreak of the civil war, in 1861, a remarkable number of ex-presidents were alive-Van Buren, at an advanced age; Tyler, who espoused the cause of the south; Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan. 18 seemed as if these men had been spared to witness the dramatic culmination of the events in which they had played so conspicuous a historic part. Tyler and Van Buren both died during the war. The other three lived some years after its close. When Lafayette revisited this country in 1894, although his friend

Washington was no more, he found 'Adams, Jefferson and Madison, all of Washington's successors in the presidential office, still living. What to do with our ex-presidents" must have seemed to him a serious question.

Of late years our presidents have not, as a rule, long survived their term of service. The strain of their office is tremendous and appears to be increasing with the years.— Youth's Companion.

His Car Pare Cane.

Probably the most extraordinary cane in this country is one of goodly proportions carried by Schator Jones, the Neveda millionaire, and the reason he clings to it as tenaclously as he does is quite unique.

Many years ago Senstor Jones, then president of a bank in San Francisco, started to ride home on a New Pattern to Made Round With street car. When the conductor came around for the fare, Mr. Jones discovered that he was without a cent. He got off and walked back to the bank, where he secured a man John Gould of Ohlo has the fol-handful of change. "I wish I had a lowing to say of siles and strape: walking stick that would hold 100 | Silo building in New York state may has cared thousands and it will en nickels," he said, "and then a thing now be set down as a sort of rage. was hollowed out and 100 nickels placed therein. The cane was later sent to Washington, where Mr. Chicago Chronicle.

Use the butter knife directly in front of your plate, not on the side. Don't put your dinner knife in the butter plate." When the escaloped fish came on, the brakeman said: "Here is where the best of them usually fall down. Use the silver affair in front of your plate, It is a cross between a fork and a spoon and looks like a scoop shovel with one corner bent." And so on with the different forks and spoons until "It was a good idea. Even the men got through without trouble," says Mr. Howe.

Concerning Windows.

It is only in the apartments of the exceptional few that windows must be arranged with reference to a good outlook. Unless you live on a square or a park or overlook the river you are not apt to have a pleasing expanse to consider, nor need you study carefully the interior of your room as part of a general line of construction leading up to a particular view outside, as when a wide window, for instance, opens directly on to a grove of oak trees. Perfect freedom-of access to windows does not have to be so carefully considered in your arrangement of things, says Harper's Bahangings, really a large part of the general framing of the room, as it were, as the walls and the doors are -one more panel in your wall surface to be decorated according to given rules. The particular prob-lem confronting the housekeeper, then, is a question of tones and lights, of agreeable shades not only harmonizing with the colors of the room and making the interior in which you are temporarily housed, with its surrounding windows and doors, one composite whole, every part blending and balancing with the other, but producing as well a restful impression upon you when you look directly toward the light.

The nine boops were clevated on a frame to their respective places, and the outside cover was put on, bucking it with heavy building paper. The allo was then lined up inside with very narrow 2% inch Georgia pine flooring. The paper was expected to spring away from the outsiding and thus really form a double air space. It would be impossible for the hosps to expand or contract, and the links would be as perfectly kept in place as on the walls of the square sile, for it is a peculiarity of Georgia pine to shrink and swell very little if any on a sile wall.

It was the experience of these men that not only were these beeps cheaper than from ones, but they did not give or contract, and the inside ceiling was always as tight as when built, and the firm nailing of inside and outside walls made them rigid and stable and impossible to rack or warp out of shape, as the iron hospic sile is so liable to do without constant attention in the summer.
