Training Made Easy.

Dry the starched articles perfectly, then dip them into a pail of boiling water and pass them through the wringer twice. They may then be ironed flat, or they may be rolled up in a dry cloth. The fabric may be ironed with greater ease after being dampened in this way than when sprinkled in the usual manner. Turpentine in starch gives an added whiteness and luster to the ironed article. Use one tablespoonful to a quart of starch.—Ladies' Home Journal.

A Simple Remedy.

That unsightly grievance, a grease spot, may be permanently removed from the floor by using common baking soda, spread thickly over the spot, and then pouring on boiling water. A chemical action takes place, and the trouble is removed.

Yell of the Sawbones.

The medical students of Syracuse (N. Y.) university have adopted the following college yell:

"Well men, sick men, dead men—still! Let 'em up, can't we? what's the diff? Mortal men, mortal blood and gore! Syracuse medico, 1904!"

Strong Again.

The woman who knows the full value of health is the woman who has lost it and regained it; the woman who from being weak and sickly is once again made a strong woman. Half a million weak and sickly women have been made strong and well by the aid of Dr. Pierce and his "Favorite Prescription." It cures the ills which weaken women. It regulates the periods, relieves neuralgia, inflammation and ulceration, and cures female weakness. It nourishes the nerves and so cures nervousness. It promotes a healthy appetite and induces refreshing sleep.

"I had female trouble," writes Mrs. L. J. Dennis, of 85 East College street, Worcester, Mass. "Words cannot express what I suffered. I sought medical advice and found none. Friends urged me to try Dr. Pierce's Prescription. When I commenced taking it, my weight increased. I weighed thirty-five pounds. Now I weigh one hundred and eighty. I was so bad I would lie from day to day and long for death to come and relieve my suffering. I had a terrible pain in the head, a terrible pain in the brain, bearing-down pain, and such distress every month, but now I never have a pain—do all my own work and am a strong and healthy woman."

Use Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets with "Favorite Prescription" if the bowels are inactive or irregular.

GEMS 'N VERSE.

Review Me, Mother Nature!
Oh, review me, homely nature!
When the spring with verdure clothes
All the pasturines, hills and valleys
With the green, the flowers, the blossoms,
When thy kindly hand bestoweth
Tender leaf and bluet green,
And thy warm heart, throbbing, sheweth
In the quivering smiley's sheen,

Truth.
Not in my way nor in your way
Does the cause of truth march on;
Yet only age has sense of progress,
Then the ages have gone,
And from its inverted shadow,
Whence the earth has drawn, bright up as sisters, for Janes parents died when she was a small child, and since then her uncle, old Tom Maddrell, had been like a father to her, and Janet a sister. Poor sickly Mrs. Maddrell had died when both the girls were almost too young to remember her.

On the particular evening of which I am writing they were talking, as indeed they often did, of Jan—say Jane—"Jan the never do well," as Janet called him.

"Jane," she said, with severity, "will never be foolish as to marry that never do well."

Jane looked up mischievously from her knitting. "Eh, Janet, but I think it's you'll be for marrying him, not me!"

"You're just silly. Ye know I'm no' for marrying. Married life's no' that easy."

"Aye, ye talk so, Janet, but it's terribly fond o' Jan ye are!"

Janet clicked her knitting needles firmly.

"It's twice as terrible fond o' him ye are, Jane."

"Eh, well," answered Jane, coloring, "we've no need to be matchin' each about it—it's p'raps not axed we'll be at ill."

Jane looked up, then hurried forward with an eager cry. "Why, Janet?"

In a moment Jan, for he it was, had caught her in his arms. "Why, Jane!" he cried. "An' just as bloomin' as ever. Lord bless me! An Janet too."

Jane was standing still. She could not move or speak for the beating of her own heart. He took her silence for coldness, and merely shook her by the hand. "Still down on me, Janet," he laughed.

He was the same handsome fellow, several shades darker and poorly clad, but as audacious and winning as ever.

"Well, me dears," he said, seating himself on the cobblestone wall, "it's surprised ye'll be to hear the news."

"What news, then, Jan?" asked Jane.

"Augh, just a little trip I'm thinkin' o' takin'."

"Why aren't ye out with the boys this evenin'?" Janet reproachfully.

"An' to think ye have to tell me!"

"Aye, for all our friends here. Even as the sun goes down to work the weeks begin to grow."

"And it will be too late to get home."

"The chores will disappear, and he will kill his dinner truck. Just as he did last year."

The Courting of Janet and Jane

BY ETHEL A. IRLAND.

© 1904, THE COURTING OF JANET AND JANE.

"Well, lad," said Quillian, jerking his thumb in the direction of a man who lounged against a post somewhat apart from the group of fisherman who were chatting on the quay. "If one has not been built, the site can go without till after the next filling. If there is plenty of slings and the pasture is not of the best, keep cows on slings till the growth improves, or if they are turned out give them a feed at night. There is not enough nutriment in fresh pasture to keep up the milk flow without assistance of a little dry feed. If the site is not completely emptied, when ready to fill remove all spoiled manure from the surface and fill with the new cut corn at once."

Doing His Best.

"Your constituents are getting annoyed with you," said the faithful advisor.

"For what reason?" inquired Senator Sorghum.

"They say you haven't done a thing to discourage the trusts that are becoming so rich and arrogant."

"You go back and tell my constituents that they're wrong me. Tell them that whenever I have come in contact with a trust I have done all in my power to take some of its money away from it."—Washington Star.
