Coping and Feeding Chicks.

I do not have any particular style of coop—a good roof and bottom of boards always made so that it can be conveniently cleaned. Twenty chicks to a hen I think about right. The coops are placed near the house for convenience while the chicks are young, moving them farther away as they grow older. At about 3 or 4 weeks they are housed near a blue grass pasture, with a number of apple trees for shade. Here they have range until cold weather drives them into winter quarters.

My first food for little chicks is dry wheat bread moistened with sweet milk. This is good enough for the first day. The second day oatmeal and millet seed are given, with milk. They get water from the start. Up to 4 weeks old their food is bread moistened with milk, sweetened, oatmeal, corn bread and so on for the table and cracked wheat. After they are 4 weeks old I discontinue the oatmeal and bread and milk and feed millet seed, whole wheat and cracked corn, with corn bread for breakfast, baked the day before. After the chicks are 2 months old I feed a bran mash consisting of one-third each of ground oats, corn and wheat bran, moistened with milk, feed or sour milk preferred. This I feed in the evening, all they will eat. I follow this method of feeding the old fowls, believing it creates the proper time for soft food. For late hatched broods (say the last of June or first of July hatches) I know of no place better for cooping than near a cornfield, with a clover meadow near by. The corn furnishes plenty of shade through the warm days, and the clover field supplies grasshoppers. I have had good results from late broods raised in this manner.—O. L. King.

MARSHFIELD OREGON

AUTOMATIC FOUNTAIN.

A Sure Method of Giving Fresh Water All the Time.

The accompanying illustrations represent an automatic drinking fountain designed to be connected with a supply of water. Either tank or city water pressure will do.

Those I use in my yard in the summer are of the following proportions, although they may be made in any length desired, provided they are set perfectly level: Ten inches wide, 6 inches deep, 50 inches in length. Make the body of the tank out of 1 by 6 inch stuff and have it lined with galvanized iron.

The cover is also made of galvanized iron formed into a half circle. This covers the entire top of the tank, all but one inch, the full length of the fountain. This prevents leaves, straw and other accumulation from blowing into the water, yet gives the fowls plenty of room to drink without upsetting or polluting the water. It also guards young chicks from drowning, as they cannot possibly get into the water.

The fountain is to be placed four and a half inches in the ground and set perfectly level. This will leave it out of the ground one and a half inches, which will prevent any dirt, etc., as in case of a heavy rain, washing into it, as would be the case if it set level with the surface. It also keeps the water perfectly cool and fresh.

As the name indicates, this fountain is perfectly automatic, requiring no filling the entire season. The automatic fittings may be procured at any plumbing establishment, as it is the same as is used in all flush water closet tanks.

Fasten the automatic feeder at or near one end of the fountain so as to give the rod and hollow copper ball plenty of freedom so that it will not catch the sides or end. Connect the feed pipe (one-half inch well) with your supply and the fountain is ready for use.

As the water enters the fountain the copper ball roller rides on the surface, raising the water, and in so doing it gradually closes the shut off valve, and when level full it is entirely closed. As the fowls drink the water it lowers the copper ball, thereby opening the valve, and admits just enough water to hold the fountain level full.

If in any case you wish to clean out the fountain it may be done inside of one minute by simply pressing the copper ball down to the bottom. This opens the valve to its full capacity and overflows the fountain, thereby carrying off any dirt that may have accumulated on the bottom.

I have used this drinking fountain for two seasons, and would not give it up for anything I have ever seen on the

All Doctors have tried to cure CATARRH by the use of powders, acid gases, inhalers and drugs in paste form. Their powders dry up the mucous membranes causing them to crack open and bleed. The powerful acids used in the inhalers have entirely eaten away the same membranes that their users have aimed to cure, while pastes and ointments cannot reach the diseased. An old and experienced practitioner who has for many years made a close study and specialty of the treatment of CATARRH, has at last perfected a Treatment which when faithfully used, not only relieves at once, but permanently cures CATARRH, by removing the cause, stopping the discharges, and curing all inflammation. It is the only remedy known to science that actually reaches the affected parts. This wonderful remedy is known as "SNUFFLES" the GUARANTEED CATARRH CURE and is sold at the extremely low price of one dollar, each package containing internal and external medicine sufficient for a full month's treatment and everything necessary to its perfect use.

HELPED THEMSELVES.

The Citizens of an Illinois Town Got a Library.

Greenup, an Illinois village, merits a library gift from Andrew Carnegie, not to awaken interest in library creation, but as a reward for what the citizens have done in meeting the need of such an educational center. They have shown how a village of 1,000 population can establish a practical library without a bequest and without the aid of public funds.

The scheme originated with the woman's club, and soon every resident was interested. A "book shower" at one of the churches brought in 282 desirable books as a nucleus, and a call for subscriptions in books or money brought the total up to 1,000 volumes. A second call added 500 more, and contributions are still coming in, no one person, however, giving more than $10. An unused room in a new schoolhouse was assigned for the library, the local carpenters putting up the shelving as their contribution, and the librarians serve without compensation.

This is only one illustration of the way in which this village takes hold of an enterprise with popular accord. It owns the waterworks plant and an electric lighting system.

The Canine City.

The time will come in the history of civilized communities when the two most important departments of a city's government will be recognized as those of health and education. I believe that the health of the community can be materially improved by a regular flushing of the surface of the streets by salt water, by the consumption of all refuse by fire and by personal cleanliness, to be secured by the working classes in public baths, the number of which should be largely increased.—Randolph Guggenbuehr, President of New York City Council.

HELPED THEMSELVES.

The Citizens of an Illinois Town Got a Library.

Greenup, an Illinois village, merits a library gift from Andrew Carnegie, not to awaken interest in library creation, but as a reward for what the citizens have done in meeting the need of such an educational center. They have shown how a village of 1,000 population can establish a practical library without a bequest and without the aid of public funds.

The scheme originated with the woman's club, and soon every resident was interested. A "book shower" at one of the churches brought in 282 desirable books as a nucleus, and a call for subscriptions in books or money brought the total up to 1,000 volumes. A second call added 500 more, and contributions are still coming in, no one person, however, giving more than $10. An unused room in a new schoolhouse was assigned for the library, the local carpenters putting up the shelving as their contribution, and the librarians serve without compensation.

This is only one illustration of the way in which this village takes hold of an enterprise with popular accord. It owns the waterworks plant and an electric lighting system.

The Canine City.

The time will come in the history of civilized communities when the two most important departments of a city's government will be recognized as those of health and education. I believe that the health of the community can be materially improved by a regular flushing of the surface of the streets by salt water, by the consumption of all refuse by fire and by personal cleanliness, to be secured by the working classes in public baths, the number of which should be largely increased.—Randolph Guggenbuehr, President of New York City Council.
