In that city the new invention has already cut down the prices of the phones to users 50 per cent.

THIS WILL JUST ABOUT END IT

The Mail devotes a column of its last issue in explaining how it happened to get mentioned in the Blue Book; says it sends the editor of that publication a copy, etc. It is probably the only copy of a Coos county paper that the editor of the Blue Book has seen, and consequently thinks it is the "only" paper in the section. We should think the "extreme modesty" of the Mail would allow a disconcerting public to form an opinion, without the overblowing of what a wonderful paper the Mail is—as viewed by itself. Is it possible that there is no one to sing its praises, and that its editors have, themselves, to throw laurels at their own efforts, as embodied in the Mail—ending of course, the supplement?—Coos Bay News.

It sometimes takes a whole bottle of antidote to counteract the effects of a spoonful of poison.

If the News doesn't go to the leading press clipping bureau it must be for one of two reasons: either the editor hasn't got enterprise enough to send it, or else with 22,000 other newspapers and periodicals received by the bureau it doesn't care for the News because there is nothing in it to clip.

Perhaps the editor of the News would hardly believe that the press clipping bureaus want the Mail mainly for the supplement. If the News would publish a supplement perhaps it could get into the Blue Book itself.

The newspaper Blue Book bears much the same relation to the newspaper fraternity that the society Blue Book does to the social stragglers in New York. And it is the object of the same sort of affected disdain from those who are left out.

In the matchless diction of the Coquille Bulletin: "Gilt wise, Mr. man."

To Collect Old War Claims

Oregon has a claim of $143,817.87, and Michigan has a similar claim, and there are about six other states having claims of some character, all of which have been disallowed. Governor Geer and Governor Bliss propose to have the matter brought up in Congress.

Mr. Woollever delivered a lecture on fraternal benefits at Libby last week and after the meeting he wrote up 20 applications for insurance and accident policies. PEREDY FOR BRONCHITIS IN CALVES

A Disease Which has Proved Fatal all Over the Pacific Coast

C. P. Coleman, of Templeton, sent to the Mail a letter and a newspaper clipping which he had received in answer to an inquiry which he sent to the Examiner asking for a remedy for a throat disease in calves. The disease, bronchitis or worm in the throat is said to be more or less prevalent in this section, and usually results fatally where no remedy is found.

Mr. Coleman says that after his inquiry in the Examiner, he received letters from all over the coast asking if he had heard of a remedy, indicating that a publication of the remedy will be of service to many owners of stock.

Chas. T. Desmond, of Netarts, Or., writes to Mr. Coleman, in part as follows: "Two years ago a great many calves were affected here with the same disease and a great many lost before a remedy was found.

The remedy is, inject 1 teaspoonful of turpentine into the windpipe, one injection may be enough but if calves don't improve, you will have to repeat.

In this neighborhood we used this treatment and not a calf was lost after we began using it.

The piece I send you from a paper, I think would be good also, although I have not used it, having no occasion since.

When injecting the turpentine great care should be taken to get it into the windpipe, if it does not go into the windpipe, it will cause an ulcer on the calf's neck."

The newspaper clipping to which Mr. Desmond refers contains a letter from Dr. Withycombe, of the state agricultural college and is in part as follows: "The disease you describe is yersiniosis bronchitis, caused by a small thread-like worm in the bronchial tubes, 'stronglyly micrivirus.' These are usually found in wet, swampy pastures, and are not produced by a hot as you mention.

The infected calves should be fed well to sustain a good constitutional vigor. Treatment is often unsatisfactory, but the intra-tracheal injection is usually the most effectual in expelling the parasites.

A good injection consists of 2 drams of oil turpentine, 20 drops of carbolic acid and 1/2 dram of chloroform. This should be injected into the windpipe. Fumigation has also been highly recommended. This is generally done by confining the calves in a tight building and burning sulphur therein. In doing this care must be exercised that the fumes are not permitted to suffocate the animals. A farmer in Lincoln county reported to the station that he had succeeded in curing his calves of the malady by compelling them to inhale the smoke from burning fir tongs. When treatment by fumigation is adopted, it should be repeated once daily for three days.

The paper in which the clipping appears says: "By way of caution, we may state that 20 drops of carbolic acid is too strong a dose for calves only two or three weeks old, when less than half that amount should be used. To inject the medicine into the windpipe, use a veterinary hyperdermic syringe."

The Mail hopes that one or both of these remedies may prove of value to its stock-owning readers.

JOLLY TIN WEDDING AT NORTH BEND

(From our N. B. correspondent.)
Mr. and Mrs. Knoll Erickson with about 75 friends and relatives celebrated the tenth anniversary of their marriage Thursday night Nov. 14th.

Mr. W. R. Simpson read the ceremony which caused more laughter than is customary at weddings.

Little Edith Thomas acted as ring bearer and carried on a tin tray a tin tumbler (such as is used in putting up stove pipe). Mr. Erickson placed the ring on Mrs. Erickson's arm.

After the most solemn wedding, dancing was indulged in till near midnight when all left the hall and went to the home of the bride and groom. There a sumptuous repast was served.

Edith will not have to buy tinware for some time to come judging from appearances last night. There were bath tubs, foot tubs, dish pans, milk pans, coffee pots, tea pots, wash boilers, tea kettles, ladles of all descriptions, spoons, flour sives, collanders, crumb trays, graters, stew pans, toasters, biscuit cutters, pie pans, cake tins, tin cups, steamers, bread box and what not?

A jolly good time was reported by all who went. I almost forgot to say that the band serenaded during the early part of the evening.

A distillery was confiscated by revenue officers today. The telegraph line in the Lokot mountains has been down two weeks.

RUHLIN KNOCKED OUT IN A FEW ROUNDS

The Jeffries-Ruhlin prize-fight in San Francisco last night resulted in a victory for Jeffries in five or six rounds. Reports of the fight were received by Clay Moore and Robt. Marsden, one by telegraph and the other by telephone. The Western Union reported the fight ended in five rounds while the phone reported six. Ruhlin was heavily outclassed. There seems to have been a case for self-termination at the close of the fight, and before Corbett and several others took a hand, until the police rushed into the ring and quelled the riot.
