Notwithstanding the cold snap several of Marshfield's belles were seen in the hills yesterday getting decorating greens and were seen by a MAIL reporter on their return loaded down with beautiful Oregon Grape, Oregon's state flower, and ferns and other beautiful evergreens. About a week ago he was kicked in the breast by one of his cows, while milking and one of the ribs on his right side was broken from the breast bone. He did not visit a doctor, thinking it unnecessary, but the hurt gave him so much pain that he concluded to have it attended to, and the doctor fixed him up so he will have no further trouble.

The Coast Mail, published at Marshfield, Oregon, sends us a marked copy containing a showing-up of a certain oily-tongued preacher and temperance lecturer named F. E. Coulter. It seems that his conceptions of mine and thine are sadly mixed and that he can lie like a hopbuyer. The latter part sounds big to be sure, but after our experience with Smith, the tinner, who also hailed either from Marshfield or Coquille, we are more than willing to take our contemporary's word for it. Consequently Rev. Coulter will find our readers as well as the editor on a look-out for number one.—Aurora Borealis.

The length of the Suez Canal is about a city mile, the cost $100,000,000, the present depth 31 feet, width at bottom 108 feet and at the surface 420 feet.

The Cronstadt and St. Petersburg Canal, which gives a passageway for great vessels to St. Petersburg, is 16 miles long, including the deepening of the bay channel, 20 1/2 feet in depth, and the total cost estimated at $10,000,000.

The Corinth Canal, which connects the Gulf of Corinth with the Gulf of Argina, is four miles in length, 26 1/2 feet in depth, 72 feet wide at the bottom, cost about $5,000,000.

The Manchester Ship Canal, which connects Manchester, England, with the Mersey River and Liverpool, was opened in 1894. Its length is 35 1/2 miles, depth 26 feet, width at bottom 120 feet and at the surface 175 feet, and cost $75,000,000.

The Kaiser Wilhelm Canal, which connects the Baltic and North seas through Germany, is 61 miles in length, 29 1/2 feet in depth, 72 feet wide at the bottom, 192 feet wide at the surface, and cost about $40,000,000. An additional canal, connecting the same bodies of water by way of the Eibe and Trave rivers, was opened in 1900. Its length is 41 miles, depth about 10 feet, width 72 feet and cost $6,000,000.

The great North Holland Canal, which connects Amsterdam with the sea, cut in 1845, has now a depth of 20 feet, and a width of 125 feet at the surface.

The Caledonian Canal, which connects the Atlantic and North Sea through the North of Scotland, is 17 feet in depth, 50 feet in width at the bottom, 250 miles long, cost $7,000,000, and is at its highest point 94 feet above the sea level.

The Canal du Midi, cut through France from Toulouse on the Garonne to Cette on the Mediterranean, a distance of 150 miles, is 6 1/2 feet deep, 60 feet wide and 600 feet above sea level at its highest point, and has 114 locks; total cost $3,500,000.

In America the canals connecting the Great Lakes are the principal ship canals, and are three in number: The Welland Canal, originally constructed in 1823 and enlarged in 1871 and 1890; the Sault Ste. Marie, or St. Mary's River Canal, opened in 1855 and enlarged in 1897, and the Canadian canal at St. Mary's River, opened in 1895. The depth of the canals at the St. Mary's River is sufficient to accommodate vessels drawing 29 feet of water. The cost of the Welland Canal was about $3,000,000, largely due to the fact that twenty-five locks are required in surmounting the rise of 327 feet in the distance of 27 miles.

The business of the St. Mary's Falls canals by far surpasses in volume that of any other canal of the world, the freight tonnage of the American and Canadian canals combined being, in 1901, 24,626,976 registered tons, while the net tonnage of the Suez Canal in 1900 was 9,378,152 tons and that of the Kaiser Wilhelm Canal 4,282,091 tons.
