A Colony of Beavers

United States Engineer H. G. Perkins and Fred Mensch, just returned from the Cascade Forest Reserve, where they have been engaged for the past three months in surveying the old Military road of the Oregon & Central Land Grant, report finding a large colony of beavers in the mountains of the Upper Deschutes, near the base of Mount Scott. There are several hundred beavers in the colony and they constitute, most probably, the only colony of these much-prized furry-coated creatures on the Coast. They have jammed up the river in many places and formed large lakes, some of which cover an area of several hundred acres.

This beaver colony should be protected, as they occupy a territory in close proximity to Crater Lake National Park, and make a valuable addition to this great natural wonder. Mr. Perkins states that there are a few trappers already at work devastating the colony and unless the official put a check to it this, one of the very few remaining colonies of beavers, will also go as the others have gone.

In January, 1890, a responsible publisher was made an offer, in writing, of $5,000, for the insertion of forty-two words in italic, beneath the description of his paper. The offer was not accepted. We think there is no harm in stating that the parties making the offer were the publishers of the New York Ledger. There was nothing objectionable in the paragraph. In former years it would have been inserted gladly for $4.25. It was a principal that was at stake—not to do for anybody or for any price a thing which would not be done for everybody at any price established and announced.—Printer's Ink.

M. A. Winter, of Wash, who is conducting a parcels post, crusade, calls attention in a recent pamphlet to the surprising fact that an eleven-pound package can be sent from Germany to any State in the Union cheaper than it can be shipped from New York City. It is certainly a discreditable anomaly that the people of the United States should be able to send eleven pound packages by mail to Germany, Mexico, and several countries in Central and South America and the West Indies, while to the next town they can send no more than four pounds in one parcel. There is no parcels post convention with the Argentine Republic, and Mr. Winter shows that a German or English dealer can ship an eleven-pound package to that country for 73 cents, while his American competitor is obliged to pay $5.73 more.

Business Meeting

The B. Y. P. U. met Wednesday evening at the home of A. H. Hodgins in West Marshfield, in the regular monthly business session. There was a good turnout and after business was disposed of the evening was passed with music and social intercourse, and the serving of toothsome refreshments.

In his latest story, "The Leather Funnel," Conan Doyle describes with quite sufficient realism the horrors of "water cure" as practiced in France in the time of Louis XIV, though in those polite days the process was known by the more judicial sounding name of "the extraordinary question." The tale is good fiction. It is based on the records of the trial and torture of a peeress of France, one of the most famous poisoners of history, and the whole is worked out by the methods which Sir Conan learned of Sherlock Holmes from a faint row of teeth marked on the hard black surface of the leather funnel, the only answer the lady vouchsafed to "the extraordinary question."

Good Idea

An excellent idea embodied in L. J. Simpson's plans for the extension of North Bend is the establishment of a public dock with 1000 feet frontage, and some 200 feet depth. This will be dedicated to the town on conditions it be maintained for public use, and the charges for dockage etc., shall not exceed the cost of keeping it in repair.

Mothers Meeting

The Mothers' meeting will be held at the residence of Mrs. Manzey's by request Saturday, Nov. 8, Topic—"Confidential Relation of Parent and Children." The meetings are both interesting and beneficial and mothers especially should not fail to attend. The interest shown by teachers and parent is truly encouraging and good results will surely follow their exchange of thought from those meetings.

Cow Ordinance

There is an impression in some quarters that there is no cow ordinance in force now. This is a mistake. The old ordinance is in full force and effect, and any cow, horses, sheep or swine at large within the defined limits are liable to impoundment. There is a strong sentiment among people living outside of those limits in favor of extending the provisions of the ordinance to the corporate limits of the town, and a new ordinance making that change will probably be passed at the next meeting of the council.

Just So

A friend makes this suggestion for Rusty Mike's diary: "Too much advertising matter in the local columns will kill the newspaper business." While not conceding that he knows anything about the newspaper business, we will grant that his point is well taken; yet, if he should want to run some locals at 10 cents a line tomorrow and we should refuse, wouldn't he think we were corned chumps?

Some people wonder why the MAIL is so strong on ads. Well in the first place people soon learn to know a good medium for their ads and we do not refuse to take the trade. Secondly you can rest assured that the money will be spent for the expansion of this paper. The more ads the more telegraphic news. Our press bills are increasing even faster than our advertising business.

From Saturday's Daily.

There are three sticks 92 feet long. One is 58 inches at one end and 208 at the other. These timbers are all clear, and will be used for shipping purposes.
