JAS. FERREY JR.
SERIOUSLY CUT.

J. L. Ferrey Jr. was cut in two places Wednesday night at the Blanco hotel by Wm. Herron, commonly known as Billy Gall. His wounds are not considered dangerous.

The circumstances of the affair were substantially as follows:

It seems that Gall had engaged a room at the Blanco and had been shown its location during the evening. A little after midnight he went upstairs with a companion and Ferrey, who was acting as night clerk suspected that he was going to take the other to lodge with him, and he went up to see about it. He says that he found Gall at the end of the hall, at the rear of the house, and asked him what he was doing there. There are varying stories, but a few moments later, Emerson Ferrey, Lowery Owen and Wm. Ferrey were on the scene, young Ferrey had been cut in two places, and Gall had been beaten up considerably. Nightwatchman Twombly took charge of Gall, placing him in the city jail.

Dr. Tower and Dr. Straw were called to attend young Ferrey, and dressed his wounds. A gash in the front of the left shoulder is quite large and deep. One in the abdomen is smaller and is not thought to have penetrated sufficiently to be dangerous.

It seems that Gall had been drinking and his story is that he was full and asked the young man who went up with him to go and show him his room.

He will probably appear before Justice Hyde this afternoon.

MAMMOTH BIRDCAGE.

One of the Little Known Attractions of the National Capital.

Washington, in addition to its other attractions, possesses the largest birdcage in the United States, perhaps in the world. It is 110 by 220 feet ground dimensions and 130 feet high and is located in the very heart of the city, at the busiest point in a busy section. It is, in fact, the court of the post-office building, and at times it is filled with sparrows, their twittering filling the air and lending a strange incongruity to the otherwise solemn surroundings of the great building.

The birds enter the glass covered court through the ventilating slats at the north and south ends near the peak of the roof, and only by accident do they find their way again to the open air. At times there are scores of them flying about within the inclosure; then a few disappear and others enter. Over the mallroom, on the ground floor, there is a flat, glass covered roof, partitioned off with planks, and on these latter are arranged many palms from the botanical gardens.

Among these the birds disport themselves as in tropical freedom, and were food supplied them there is small doubt that they would engage to remain indefinitely in such comfortable quarters, for after the first fright at seeming capture of a new bird the little creatures seem to adapt themselves happily to their new quarters, and only when the pangs of hunger attack them do they make any attempt to find their way again to the open.—Washington Times.

The Way Cyclones Turn.

The question is often asked, Why do cyclones, "whirlwinds" and tornadoes all persist in the polar whirl from right to left? Astronomical speculators have supposed that all the planets once existed as rings of thinly scattered matter around the sun and that these rings were annular segregations from a vague, irregularly scattered mass that turned one way in spiral courses, thus determining the direction in which the rings revolved, and all the rest from this took the same course.

"But," you say, "why did the nebula revolve at all?" It grew from chaos, and chaos presumably possessed an inherent motion from right to left. This being the case, from that time to this sun, moon, stars, planets, cyclones and tornadoes have adhered to the original habit.

Surmounting a Difficulty.

Alice, who was five years old, was often asked to run errands for her mother. She went very willingly if she could pronounce the name of the article wanted, but she dreaded the laughter which greeted her attempts to pronounce certain words. "Vinegar" was one of the hardest for her. She never would go for it if she could help it, but one morning her mother found it absolutely necessary to send her. On entering the store she handed the jug to the clerk and said, "Smell the jug and give me a quart."—Chicago Chronicle.
