NORTH BEND vs COQUILLE

The game at North Bend in the forenoon between the home team and Coquille drew a good attendance and was a good clean game, although somewhat one-sided. The field was in fine condition. The North Bend team bunched their hits well. A feature of the game was Benton's batting and McKeown's fielding. Gerard pitched a good game and was ably caught by Bliss. North Bend is going to do her best to beat Marshfield next Sunday, and it will undoubtedly be one of the best games of the season. Marshfield has beaten North Bend both time and now the Bend boys are going to try and turn the tables.

The score of Sunday's game was as follows.

The Cow Had No Warning.

A Maryland justice of the peace in deciding an action against a railroad company for killing a cow near a road crossing decided the case in favor of the plaintiff for the reason that "the defendant had no sign up at the crossing."

Why She Would Not Marry

(Original.)

Two strangers, Mark and Sarah Colter, appeared in Lone Star Gulch one morning, informed the miners living there that they were brother and sister, built a cabin and settled themselves. Mark Colter bought a claim and every morning, about sunrise, he would stand on the porch and look at the house across the gulch.

the housework. Sarah was a good looking woman thirty years of age, and had not been long at Lone Star Gulch before she was sought in marriage by several miners. She, however, declined the attentions of them all, declaring that she was devoted to her brother and would not leave him.

There was one, however, who persisted. This was Ralph McCann. He was a fair haired, blue eyed fellow of twenty-eight and had a very attractive way with him, especially for women. He soon made headway with Sarah Colter, who did not from the first turn to him the cold shoulder she had turned to her other suitors. Mark Colter, instead of rejoicing in the prospect of being relieved of the support of a sister, flinched on her acceptance of the attentions of McCann, whom he at last forbade to pursue. McCann appealed to Sarah, and by him in preference to her brother, but Sarah did nothing but weep and wring her hands. Evidently she was bound to her brother by some extraordinary tie, and it was plain that she had fallen deeply in love with the stranger.

One evening after working hours Colter and McCann met on the roadway running between the few houses ranged on either side and known as the town of Lone Star Gulch. "Colter," said McCann, "I would like some explanation with regard to your objections to my attentions to your sister. We are devotedly attached to one another, I have some money and a good claim and can give the best of references. If there is any reason that I can explain away—"

"All I have to say to you, Ralph McCann, is to let my sister alone."
"I certainly will if she desires it or if you will give me any good ground for your opposition."
"You say you'll let her alone if she desires it. Do you mean to tell me that she doesn't desire it?"

"She clings to you in preference to me, but her heart—"

Colter turned white. He made as if to draw his revolver, but instantly changed his mind.
"Let her alone," he cried fiercely and strode away rapidly.

The next morning a note from Sarah was left at McCann's door begging him to desist from any further attempt to win her or even to see or communicate with her, adding that she could never be his wife as long as her brother lived. McCann, knowing by the tone of her letter that she was in earnest, made no further attempt to see her.

One afternoon when the coach passed through Lone Star Gulch a stout woman with a resolute look on her face got off with her clothes tied up in a bundle and put up in the only boarding house in the place. What the woman, who called herself Mrs. Wilbur, was to do in this out of the way mining town did not transpire, but there was a surprise among the citizens when it was known a few days later that she had gone to live at the Colters'. The surprise was occasioned by the fact that Colter and his sister had lived entirely alone, never receiving any company, and there was not a family in the gulch where any one, especially as unattractive a woman as Mrs. Wilbur, would be less likely to find board.

The day after the event there were rumors of high words being heard in the middle of the night at the Colters', but as there were no evidences of trouble, except for the grim appearance of Mrs. Wilbur and a certain whipped cut look about Colter, no one could surmise what had occurred—that is, no one but Ralph McCann, who got his explanation in this wise:

Having need to go to a neighboring town for some blasting material, he set out early in the morning and was returning in the afternoon when he saw Sarah Colter on the road coming toward him.

"Where are you going?" asked McCann when they met.
"From the man with whom I have been living."
"Your brother?"
"I supposed he was my husband," replied Sarah, with a tremor in her voice, "but I was deceived. He had a wife before he married me. His name is James Wilbur, and his wife has appeared with proofs of her marriage to him."

McCann sat for a few minutes thunderstruck, first incensed at the wrong that had been done the woman he loved, then a joy welling up in his heart that there was no insurmountable barrier between them.
"So this is the reason you clung to Colter. You supposed you were his wife. Why did you pass as brother and sister?"
"He forced me to it, making a pretended confession after we were married that he had been involved in unfortunate business transactions that would cause criminal prosecution if he was found. His real reason was to avoid his wife, who would be less likely to trace one living with a sister than a wife."

"What are you going to do now?"
"Get away from him."
"Very well, I will go with you."
Neither Ralph McCann nor Sarah Colter, as she had been called, was over-zealous in Lone Star Gulch again. They were a very happy couple in a new home.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

The four greatest needs of Great Britain, coal, iron and lumber—are the ones which the United States would best be able to supply.

The yearly gross earnings of the United States Steel corporation are approximately equal to the gross revenue received by the United States government.

Seventy French firms manufacture motor cars and their combined output last year was 12,000 cars. The industry employed 180,000 workmen, earning on an average $300 a year each.

Large deposits of stone suitable for lithographic purposes have been discovered and opened in Thessaly, Greek experts report that this stone is far superior in quality to the best lithographic stone heretofore known in Europe.

Under the heading, "A New German Industry," German papers state that the manufacture of quartz glass is rapidly developing in that country. Quartz glass consists essentially of melted quartz and is perfectly transparent.

The membership of the United Mine Workers of America, as shown from the number who paid the per capita tax during the month of March, is larger than it has ever been in the history of the organization. Last year it reached 232,000, while this year it is 264,439.

Peat fuel in freight locomotives in Sweden has hauled the maximum load, the cost being about the same as with English coal. To avoid the expense of an extra fireman, however, the peat is now mixed with an equal weight of coal, and the mixture has proven so satisfactory that it is to be tried on passenger trains.

The shape of the rudder of a vessel seems to be of more importance than has been generally supposed. Experiments in Scotland by J. Foster King indicate that the rectangular form has decided advantages, as it presents a larger surface at the lode line under all conditions and requires a smaller stock and working gear than curved shapes. With sufficient area the narrow blade is as effective as the broad one, while it can be set more rapidly.

WOMAN PRISON CHAPLAIN.

Minister Regularly to the Hardened Convicts Confined in Laramie (Wy.) Jail.

The only woman in the world engaged as chaplain in a prison is Mrs. May Preston Slosson, of Wyoming, and she performs her duties with a zeal that is worthy of all praise. She is a regularly ordained minister of the Gospel and might be settled over a prosperous church, but she sees her duty lies among the convicts at Laramie and has chosen that as her field of effort, reports the Christian Advocate.

Mrs. Slosson received a degree granted to a woman university, where she was two years after she had received her degree at Hillsdale, Michigan.

After graduating professorship of G. college, Nebraska, in 1891 to Prof. Edwin Slosson, professor of chemistry at Wyoming in Laramie.

In Wyoming the state penitentiary kept without work their employment. Men the saving grace of work, to what part of the common belong, soon become thrown on their balances. That happened to prisoners, who got into a peculiarly morbid and unruly condition.

It was in that frame of mind that Mrs. Slosson conceived the idea which the authorities permitted her to put into practice. She arranged for a series of Sunday afternoon talks and experimental lectures by the professors of the university.

She herself gave two lectures before the convicts, and when the minister who was acting as the chaplain left the town the prisoners petitioned the governor to appoint her chaplain. He acceded to the request, and since July, 1899, she has filled the office not only to the satisfaction of the authorities, but, what is more important, to the satisfaction of those who are the enforced members of her congregation.

The prisoners number some 220 and consist for the most part of young men who have gone west from a spirit of adventure and have got into trouble either through drink or from "getting the brand on the wrong cattle," as cattle branding is euphemistically referred to by the men themselves.

Writing to Pay His Way.

A nervous bridegroom, after he had been married by Rev. Charles M. Sheldon, of Topeka, searched his pockets hurriedly, and then breathlessly declared that he had neglected to provide for the clergyman's fee. "But," he added, brightening up, "I can show you how to fix your gas meter so that it won't register."
