

RAILROADS NOMINATED HARRISON.

The following extract taken from the Chicago Tribune, published the day before Harrison was nominated, shows that the railroad monopolies headed by Depew did the work and defeated the hated grangers. The Tribune is a republican paper:

"The action of the majority of the New York delegation, during yesterday's recess, in uniting on Harrison instead of Allison, was a surprise to many delegates, and to none more than to Allison's chief supporters, who had received positive assurances that after Depew's withdrawal Allison would receive a majority of the votes of the New York delegation. These pledges would have been carried out but for Mr. Depew, who at the conference of delegates declared with emphasis he could not consent to the support of Allison by the New York delegation. In view of the legislation adopted by the state of Iowa affecting railroad interests he was unalterably opposed to Mr. Allison or any other candidate from that state or any other conspicuous for its granger legislation. He did not hesitate to affirm that if Allison or any other man representing a state which had followed the policy of Iowa with reference to railroads should be nominated the whole influence of the corporation which he represented and those which had a common interest with his company would be thrown against the republican candidate.

"Mr. Depew came to Chicago with the presidential bee in his bonnet, but his boom failed to grow, and his failure to receive any substantial support was attributed by him and his supporters chiefly to the unalterable opposition of the Granger states. The Iowa delegation in particular had not hesitated to say, when questioned, that Mr. Depew, if nominated, would make their state doubtful in the presidential election. The granger delegates had in fact said they would not have a railroad candidate, and Mr. Depew retorted that the New York Central would not have the candidate of any granger state. He continued with an effort to demonstrate that Harrison would be acceptable to the railroads and would be recognized by them as railroad candidate. Harrison—a railroad attorney, identified with Elkins in Wall street schemes and Montana cattle bubbles—was the ideal candidate of Mr. Depew. He could promise the support of the New York Central railroad to a candidate he introduced, but he would not guarantee that it would be bestowed on any republican less closely identified with the dark side of Wall street and the back alleys of dubious financial adventures.

"The threat meant so much in New York politics and was so alarming that the other delegates surrendered their first choice reluctantly and fell in with Mr. Depew's plans.

"In the whole history of the republican party we have never known a proposition of this nature to be seriously made on behalf of any candidate, and we have never known the New York Central railroad, whose president in his capacity as executive of several corporations now enjoys a salary of $100,000 a year, to send its chief to a republican national convention with the serious idea that he could either secure the nomination for himself or dictate it on behalf of some other candidate. A nomination so brought about would not only involve the party in serious danger, but possibly involve its disruption and disgrace. Never before have the plutocrats boldly and defiantly dared to offer a candidate for the approval of a republican national convention. Never before have they dared to put the stigma of ostracism upon those glorious republican states of the northwest known as the granger states—Iowa, Wisconsin, Illinois, Kansas, Minnesota, Nebraska, Michigan and Indiana herself—without which no republican candidate can come within hailing distance of an election. We warn Mr. Depew and his infatuated followers in the New York delegation that they have assumed a serious responsibility in proposing the nomination of Harrison as the heir to the New York Central influence."

SENATOR CLOUGH SAYS THE WAR IS OVER.

CHICAGO, June 29.—John H. Clough, a life long republican and for the past eight years Senator from the Fourth ward of Chicago, says he cannot stand the republican protection and free whisky plank. He says the war is over and the tariff should be reduced to an equitable basis.

The trouble in the iron mills west of the Allegheny Mountains is serious and threatens to throw 100,000 men out of employment either by a strike or a lockout. The protected manufacturers want to reduce the scale of wages. Their proposition was made at the annual meeting which takes place between the employers and the men to fix prices of wages for the year beginning July 1st. The Pittsburg workers have declared that they will accept no reduction of the present scale and it is expected that they will quit work to-day.

CURRENT COMMENT.

In a word, the republican party goes to the country as opposing tax reduction except upon whisky and tobacco, or the alternative plan of reducing revenue by increasing tariff duties to the prohibitive point on goods that may be produced in this country. They would also obviate the necessity of tax reduction by larger expenditure. Here is a plain issue, easily understood, and there is nothing else in the question. The fusian of opposing "combinations" and "trusts" while supporting the policy of discrimination which makes combinations and trusts possible; prating about a merchant marine and in the same breath opposing free ships, and affecting to be concerned for the interests of labor whilst insisting upon the maintenance of a system which robs the employe for the benefit of the employer, will pass with intelligent men for what it is worth. The significant omission of the platform is the customary coddling word for the Prohibitionists. The temperance poker is getting red-hot and the platform builders were afraid to touch it. Except for its stand on the tariff question the platform is weak.

The Oregonian says that while the Page bill for restriction of Chinese immigration was before the senate Harrison showed that the amendment forbidding the naturalization of Chinese was wholly unnecessary since the proposed measure was already a law and incorporated in the revised statutes. We have taken the trouble to go through the congressional record as touching the Page bill and find there is not a word of truth in the statement. This statement we believe was first made east and telegraphed to this coast, and we suppose the Oregonian accepted it as true without consulting the record. It is certainly due to the readers of that paper that it should correct this material misrepresentation of Harrison's record. Harrison said nothing at all about the bill, nor did he discuss it or any of the several amendments offered to it but contented himself with voting against every restrictive feature of the bill without giving any reason therefore.
