THE JUTE BAG TARIFF.

Of all the various kinds of impositions which farmers have to submit to on account of our high protective tariff, none is such an "inexcusable folly and iniquity of that whole monstrous bundle of iniquities and absurdities called the tariff law," as the duty upon jute bags which farmers have to use so extensively in handling their grain. When we reflect that no jute is raised in this country, and that not one in ten of the jute sacks used by our farmers is manufactured here, what must be thought of that vicious policy that imposes upon the farmer a tax of 40 per cent on these sacks when he can scarcely make ends meet in raising wheat in competition with the pauper labor of India. Let us view all the circumstances and conditions under which protectionists claim a protective tariff is demanded and see if any one of these conditions exists as to jute sacks. A protective tariff will produce revenue for the government, but, as the government needs no revenue, then the tariff on that account is not justified. A protective tariff is said to be needed to protect the "infant industry" of jute production, but as jute is not raised in this country we need no tariff for that purpose. A protective tariff is needed to protect the "infant industry" of jute bag manufacturing. But as not one in ten of the bags used in this country is manufactured here, nor the raw material out of which it is made grown here, then there is no excuse for taxing the farmers of the country millions every year to keep a few sickly jute mills running. The farmers of the country could make money by buying out every jute bag factory in the country, allow it to stand idle and decay, and pension every person engaged in performing labor at such factories if they could in return have the duty removed from imported jute bags. But let us go into the details of this duty. It is estimated that there will be three million bushels of grain harvested in Linn county this year. To handle this grain will require one and a half million sacks. The duty upon each sack amounts to from one and three-quarters to two cents. The duty on one and a half million sacks at one and three-quarter cents would be $26,250. This enormous tax is imposed upon the farmers of Linn county every year without any reason or excuse whatever. The Mills bill, as it should, provides for putting jute sacks on the free list, and we hope the Senate, whatever bill it may pass, will do likewise. Every farmer can make his own calculation as to what this tax will cost him each year. If he raises six thousand bushels of grain he will need three thousand sacks, and the duty would be $52.50. If he uses one thousand sacks this tax on him would be $17.50. If he should use five thousand sacks his tax would amount to $88.50, and so on.

An old gentleman, a republican, worth many, many thousands of dollars, living near Albany, was heard to say on the streets of this city four years ago to-day, when some ardent democrat assured him that Cleveland would be elected: "Well I wouldn't mind it if I could be assured that he would not pay the rebel debt when he got in." Another republican was heard to say that the worst result to follow the election of Cleveland was the re-enslavement of the negroes. Another felt as though the country would be ruined if Cleveland should be elected, because he would then pension all the rebel soldiers, and so on the song of lamentation was kept up. The first gentleman is well-known to nearly everybody in and around Albany and his sincerity and candor were unquestioned, though his credulity was not an object of envy by any democrat or sensible republican. But he believed then that the dire calamities predicted by republican papers would inevitably follow the election of Mr. Cleveland. He was to be commiserated of course, but what must be thought now of the same old man who shudders as he sits mournfully on a dry good's box and predicts, and even now asserts, as a fact, that in case Mr. Cleveland is re-elected financial ruin will sweep over the country as an angry besom of destruction, our manufacturing will all be shut down, wages of laborers reduced to a level with those of Europe, and the country generally go to the demdition how-wows. Gentle reader, it is upon such scares as we mentioned in the first part of this article that the republicans attempted to carry the election in 1884, but you know the result. They are now trying to scare the people into electing Harrison. What will be the result?

WEATHER INDICATIONS.—For the 24 hours beginning at 12 o'clock, noon.
Clear weather, lower temperature.

We have received from Siegel Cooper & Co., of Chicago, Illinois, a fine large picture 22x28 inches of Cleveland and Thurman, Mr. Cleveland being on the left and on the right Thurman, while the center is taken up by the democratic platform Washington, the father of our country Jefferson and Jackson, the founders of the democratic party, are shown in conspicuous places, so is the American eagle, and the stars of the original 13 states are not forgotten. The ensemble is surrounded by a wreath with 49 stars, in the center of same is given the name and number of electoral votes of 38 states with names of 10 territories and the District of Columbia. The picture is sent to any one postpaid for 50 cents.

Senator Beck says: "If this were not presidential election year I think that I could name over half a dozen republican Senators who would vote for the Mills bill I believe Ingalls, Davis, Sabin, Cullem, Farwell, Plumb and several others would vote with the democrats in passing a bill which would approximate the Mills bill very closely. On our side there are only two men who might vote against it—McPherson and Brown—but I don't think even they would vote against the party if the bill could be brought up."

We can sell you a ticket to any point in the East over the famous Canadian Pacific railway from five to ten dollars cheaper than any other road. Call and see us.
