NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For President—GROVER CLEVELAND, of New York
For Vice President—ALLEN G. THURMAN, of Ohio
For Presidential Electors—
W. R. BLYTHE, of Linn county,
W. H. BRYAN, of Multnomah county,
J. L. CLYDE, of Clatsop county.

AGAIN WE ASK: "ARE YOU CANDID?"

Again we appeal to fair-minded republicans who have been led to believe that President Cleveland favors free trade to compare the vital text of his message with the views of many leading republicans, and then candidly say whether the message means "free trade." The following is the vital text of the message:

"It is not proposed to entirely relieve the country of this taxation. It must be extensively continued as the source of the Government's income; and in a readjustment of our tariff the interests of American labor engaged in manufacture should be carefully considered, as well as the preservation of our manufacturers."

Now, then, read the following from Mr. Cleveland's letter of acceptance: "The cost of government must continue to be met by a tariff duty collected at our custom houses upon imported goods and by an internal revenue tax assessed upon spirituous and malt liquors, tobacco and oleomargarine. We propose, therefore, to stimulate our domestic industrial enterprises by freeing from duty imported raw materials which by the employment of labor are used in our home manufactures, thus extending the markets for their sale and permitting an increased and steady production with allowance of abundant profits. True to the undeviating course of the democratic party we will not neglect the interests of our laborers and our workmen. In all our efforts to remedy existing evils we will furnish no excuse for the loss of employment or the reduction of the wages of honest toil. On the contrary, we propose, in any adjustment of our revenue laws, to concede such encouragement and advantage to the employes of domestic labor as will easily compensate for any difference that may exist between the standard of wages which should be paid to our laboring men and the rate allowed in other countries. We propose, too, by extending the markets for our manufacturers, to promote steady employment of labor, while, by cheapening the cost of the necessities of life, we increase the purchasing power of the workingman's wages and add to the comforts of his home."

General John A. Logan, April 18th, 1870: "Now when the gentleman, who seems to be the protector in an especial manner of the great labor interests of this country, speaks of this protection being the protection of the labor of this country, I ask him: Does not every farmer and mechanic in this broad land make use of iron in all kinds of labor? The 4,000,000 men that have been freed recently are laborers, are producers, not manufacturers. They are not men of skilled labor; they evidently are not men who are protected. And then there are the men in the Northwest who produce corn, wheat, oats, pork and beans, etc.; they are producers and consumers, and are not protected; and it is they who pay this large amount of money into the pockets of the manufacturers of this article. And when a gentleman stands upon this floor and tells me that this high, this extraordinarily high tariff, is for the protection of the laboring men, I tell him that I do not understand how he can possibly substantiate such a theory."

My republican friend, read that again and then say which is the free trader, Cleveland or Logan.

James A. Garfield, April 1st, 1870: "Duties should be so high that our manufacturers can fairly compete with the foreign product, but not so high as to enable them to drive out the foreign article, enjoy a monopoly of the trade, and regulate the prices as they please. This is my doctrine of protection. If Congress pursues this line of policy steadily we shall, year by year, approach more nearly to the basis of free trade, because we shall be more nearly able to compete with other nations on equal terms. I am for a protection which leads to ultimate free trade."

Garfield has always been regarded as the oracle of his party. Which is more nearly a free trader, he or Cleveland?

President Arthur, Annual Message, 1882: "A total abolition of excise taxes would almost inevitably prove a serious, if not an insurmountable obstacle to a thorough revision of the tariff and to any considerable reduction in import duties. The present tariff system is, in many respects, unjust. It makes unequal distributions, both of its burdens and its benefits. I recommend an enlargement of the free list so as to include within it the numerous articles which yield inconsiderable revenue, a simplification of the complex and inconsistent schedule of duties upon certain manufactures, particularly those of cotton, iron and steel, and a substantial reduction of the duties upon those articles, and upon sugar, molasses, silk, wool and woolen goods."

Now we ask our republican readers to carefully read and compare these openly expressed views of the great leaders of their party with the views of President Cleveland as expressed above, and then candidly and honestly answer the question whether they consider the views of Mr. Cleveland that of a free trader. They can not candidly say they do. President Cleveland has not taken nearly so radical a position on tariff reform as nearly all the republican leaders in the last decade. We might give extracts from speeches and writings of scores of others who made the republican party great, such as Allison, Folger, Grant, McCulloch, Sherman, Hale, Ingalls, Lodge, Long, McKinley and scores of others taking stronger ground in favor of tariff reduction, did space permit. No candid man who reads Cleveland's message or the Mills bill would think of saying they mean free trade.

Chauncey M. Depew has knocked the last prop from under the "British Gold and Cobden Club" scarecrow of his high tariff friends. He quoted one of the most intelligent of English noblemen as expressing a hope that Harrison would be elected, giving as a reason that tariff reduction, as proposed by the Democrats, would injure English manufacturers. His opinion was that with free raw materials American manufacturers would become formidable competitors in the world's market. And he was right.

We have entered upon no crusade of free trade. The reform we seek to inaugurate is predicated upon the utmost care for established industries, a jealous regard for the interests of American labor and a sincere desire to relieve the country from the injustice and damper of a condition which threatens evil to all the people of the land.—President Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance.

It seems perfectly clear that when the Government, this instrumentality created and maintained by the people to do their bidding, turns upon and, through an utter perversion of its powers, extorts from their labor and capital tribute largely in excess of public necessities, the creature has rebelled against the creator and the masters are robbed by their servants.—President Cleveland's Letter of Acceptance.

WHERE TO GO.

An Important Question.

Some will say to the grand old ocean at Newport; some to breezy Ilwaco; some to the health giving Springs at Sodaville and Waterloo, and some to where the deer graze in the mountains; but the general verdict will be, when you are after dry goods, boots, shoes, clothing, furnishing goods, etc., to go to A. B. Mellwain's, Albany, Or. After the most bountiful harvest in the history of Oregon the question is a very important one. Big crops with low prices and good goods will make things flourish. If you would realize this combination call on Mr. Mellwain and you will be taken through his large double store and be shown goods and prices that will impress this fact on your mind. His stock of dry goods is complete and selected to meet the demands of this growing community. In dress goods of all kinds he has a stock that speaks for itself. New designs, styles and patterns. His line of woolen goods is remarkably fine, and as fall is now here, deserves your consideration. Superior goods at low prices is the program. His stock of flannels is a good one and now is the time to buy. In ladies' shoes he can surprise you at their cheapness considering the quality of the article. You will not lose anything by examining his boot and shoe stock generally. Mr. Mellwain's clothing and furnishing goods department is well stocked with a good assortment of goods which he is selling at very low prices.

Mr. Mellwain's goods generally have been bought under the market, and hence can be sold at prices that defy competition. Farmers, laboring men, mechanics, men, women and children should inspect his large assortment of goods, as it will be business for them to do so. A dollar saved is a dollar earned as much now as ever, and Mr. Mellwain proposes to help you do this by giving you the prices and goods.

Large crops and high prices for wheat in order to make prosperous times should be followed by close buying in the best market, hence it will be to your advantage to call on A. B. Mellwain who has the goods and prices to give you bargains such as cannot be obtained elsewhere.

Wm McKinnon and Mr Bradehaw, of Sweet Home, or thereabouts, are in the city to-day.

Bargains! Bargains!! Bargains!!!

Remember we are closing out our stock of boots and shoes and have yet some very desirable styles. Come and see for yourselves and you will not regret it.
