NATIONAL DEMOCRATIC TICKET.

For President—GROVER CLEVELAND, of New York
For Vice President—ALLEN G. THURMAN, of Ohio
For Presidential Electors—
W. R. BILYEU, of Linn county.
W. [illegible] of Multnomah county
S. [illegible] of Clackamas county.

Gen. Harrison accuses the Democratic Administration of "nursing the surplus." Isn't this better than squandering it, as the republicans in Congress have tried to do?

Judge Thurman will speak in Indiana as follows: Shelbyville, October 15th, at which time an immense barbecue will be had. Peru, October 17th, and at Brazil, October 20th.

Every citizen in this land is a sovereign. The labor must have an equal standing before the law with the millionaire. That is why every vote this fall to put an end to class legislation.

"We do not offer a fixed schedule but a principle," says Mr. Harrison of the republican position on the tariff. The schedule is already "fixed" at the war average of 47 per cent, and the republicans in Congress resist every effort to lower it. The "principle" they offer is that the politicians can spend all that the people will pay.

The doctors disagree. Dr. Harrison says he "doubts not some effective legislative means will be found of dealing with trusts" Dr. Blaine says "trusts are largely private affairs with which neither President Cleveland nor private citizens (through legislatures or congress) have any particular right to interfere."

Of the 225 labor papers that is on our exchange list we find that about 125 advocate a modified tariff as represented by the democratic platform, about 35 in favor of absolute free trade, about 40 in favor of high tariff, and the balance divided between the Union Labor and United Labor tickets, without regard to the tariff question.—Critic.

Henry Cabot Lodge, republican member of Congress from Massachusetts, said, in September, 1884: "Grave public questions confront us. There is a large, perilous and growing surplus in the revenues. It must be removed, not by needless and extravagant expenditures, not by abolishing the proper taxation of whisky and tobacco, but by freeing entirely those great necessaries of life which enter into the daily consumption of every household, and by wise and discriminating reductions." Now this man is shouting for Harrison and demanding the repeal of the tax on whisky before reducing any tariff duty.

Ex-Senator Joseph E. McDonald says of democratic prospects in Indiana: "I regard the situation in Indiana as very favorable to the success of the democratic party. Neither the republican party nor the democratic party has a majority in the state, and the elements out of which they have to secure a majority are now favorable to the democrats rather than to the republicans, and they are especially friendly to our nominees. President Cleveland is especially strong because of the confidence in him as an executive officer."

According to good republican authority—namely, that of Mr. James P. Foster president of the Republican League of the United States—the election of Harrison hangs upon a very slender thread. Having failed, apparently, in his famous attempt to "fry the fat" out of the manufacturers who profit by the tariff, he has come down to dollar subscriptions, in behalf of which he has issued an almost hysterical appeal to the various republican leagues. "To successfully carry on a war against the free trade democracy it is necessary for the League to raise a large sum of money, and to do it speedily," he says. He offers other inducements, also, besides the promised victory of Harrison, for every subscriber is to get "an elegant souvenir which will be worth the money he has given," and every club which collects $200 will receive an "elegant silk banner, with pole, cords, etc., an elegant affair, which any club may be proud to possess." Little Mr. Foster trying to stem the rising tide in favor of Grover Cleveland and tariff reform with his "elegant" souvenirs and banners is a spectacle fit to excite the laughter of gods and men.

That James G. Blaine is the hope of the Republican party and the center of attraction is evidenced by the almost total ignoring of Harrison, and should Harrison be elected, Blaine would be the President. It is said that Mr. Blaine raised a campaign purse of $1,000,000 from among the trusts, railways and other corporations, and that is why Blaine made his defense of the trusts when he said a trust was a private affair and that President Cleveland or no one else had the right to interfere. Harrison, a figure head; Blaine, the real candidate, and Morton importing contract labor! What kind of a racket are the Republicans playing, anyway?

As the President says, this is no crusade of free trade. No one not a lunatic desires the establishment of free trade in the United States. It would he as absurd in one direction as the theory of an absolutely home market for all we manufacture or produce, maintained by a Chinese wall of protection, is on the other. It is as true now as it has been, that our industries require protection against certain forms of foreign competition, and that the best way to raise a revenue for national expenses, aside from the taxes on luxuries and vicious indulgences like whisky and tobacco, is from a tax on import.

We would like to have some of our high protectionist friends inform us why it is that if protection is such a good thing for the working men, why it is that there are so many immigrants coming into this country from highly protected Italy and Germany, and so few from free trade England. This is something the American laborer can't "catch" onto.

Allen G. Thurman has reiterated and enforced the principle that the tariff is a tax. Grover Cleveland asserts without fear of contradiction that unnecessary taxation is unjust taxation. The two premises lead straight to the logical deduction that an unnecessary tariff is unjust taxation, and the syllogism is completed.

Congress is investigating the jute trust, and a resolution has been introduced by Mr Hooker, authorizing the President to suspend the collection of duty on imported cotton bagging until the trust is "bursted." There are mine bills before the house on the subject of trusts.

If the inability of our manufacturer t compete with foreigners is due to our wages, why does he want wages made higher by a protective tariff?

Barney Frost, a broker on the Pittsburg, Pa., Oil and Stock Exchange, offers to bet $100,000 that Cleveland will be elected.

WHERE TO GO.

An Important Question.

Some will say to the grand old ocean at Newport; some to breezy Ilwaco; some to the health giving Springs at Sodaville and Waterloo, and some to where the deer graze in the mountians; but the general verdict will be, when you are after dry goods, boots, shoes, clothing, furnishing goods, etc., to go to A. B. McIlwain's, Albany, Or. After the most bountiful harvest in the history of Oregon the question is a very important one. Big crops with low prices and good goods will make things flourish. If you would realize this combination call on Mr. McIlwain and you will be taken through his large double store and be shown goods and prices that will impress this fact on your mind. His stock of dry goods is complete and selected to meet the demands of this growing community. In dress goods of all kinds he has a stock that speaks for itself. New designs, styles and patterns. His line of woolen goods is remarkably fine, and as fall is now here, deserves your consideration. Superior goods at low prices is the program. His stock of flannels is a good one and now is the time to buy. In ladies' shoes he can surprise you at their cheapness considering the quality of the article. You will not lose anything by examining his boot and shoe stock generally. Mr. McIlwain's clothing and furnishing goods department is well stocked with a good assortment of goods which he is selling at very low prices.

Mr. McIlwain's goods generally have been bought under the market, and hence can be sold at prices that defy competition. Farmers, laboring men, mechanics, men, women and children should inspect his large assortment of goods, as it will be business for them to do so. A dollar saved is a dollar earned as much now as ever, and Mr, McIlwain propses to help you do the saving by giving you the prices and goods.

Large crops and high prices for wheat in order to make prosperous times should be followed by close buying in the best market, hence it will be to your advantage to call on A. B. McIlwain who has the goods and prices to give you bargins such as cannot be obtained elsewhere.

SEE THEM.—Some very fine hall trees, or hat racks, a combination affair, elegant in design, new in make up, just the thing, received by Wm. Fortmiller
